DOUBLE MURDER OCCURS AS MEN LEAVE GARAGE IN CLEVELAND

Louis Rosen, 29, and Brother-in-law are Shot to Death.

GUEST VICTIM

Six Shots Take Effect; One Man Also Stabbed.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 13.—Victims of a war among bootleggers, according to police theory, Louis Rosen, 29, and his brother-in-law, Adolph Adelson, 5608 Gairnor road, Philadelphia, were murdered early today in a garage in the rear of Rosen's new home, said to have been purchased as part of his profits in the illegal sale of liquor.

One Killed by Mistake.

The men were shot as they were leaving the garage. Six shots were fired. All of which took effect. In addition there was a jagged wound believed to have been caused by a bullet which had penetrated Adelson's heart.

Police this morning were questioning a man said to have been Rosen's partner in distributing liquor. Police are working on a theory that bootleggers caused the killing. Rosen, a baker, was said to have given up his business some months ago, and in working up trade to have interfered with the business of what is known as the "Woodland Avenue" gang. Adelson, an income tax accountant, with an office in the Finance building, Philadelphia, was visiting at Rosen's home. He was not connected, according to police theory, with the business, but was the victim of mistaken identity. Police believe he was mistaken in the dim light of early morning for Rosen's partner.

Cleverly Laid Plans.

The plans for the murder were cleverly laid. In order that a getaway might be effected without pursuit.

LINCOLN WAY BOOSTER HERE

G. S. Hoag, on Way to New York, Stops in City.

G. S. Hoag, vice president and field secretary for the Lincoln Highway association, passed through East Liverpool Thursday enroute to New York, his last trip over the route this year. Mr. Hoag reached the city Wednesday afternoon and left for Pittsburgh Thursday afternoon.

He denied any possibility of the official route of the Lincoln highway being changed so as to pass through Youngstown, New Castle and Butler, a campaign for which is being conducted by the Youngstown Automobile club.

"The only change in the present routing of the Lincoln highway through this section which will be considered is the route from East Liverpool via Chester, into Pittsburgh through the Southside," said Mr. Hoag. "The association is interested in this route, for it is not only shorter than any other road, but it eliminates a lot of congestion and also gets away from the fog, which prevails along the river communities."

"With the passage of a big road bond issue in Beaver county at last week's election, we are hopeful that the road between Laughlin's Corners and Clinton will be completed at an early date. The county and state are known to be very friendly toward this improvement and it is believed that sufficient money can be made available to construct at least part of the highway."

MAYOR, CAPTAIN OF POLICE AND PATROLMAN AT JURY INQUIRY

East End Murder Case is Investigated at Lisbon.

OTHERS ON SLATE

Special Session of Grand Jury Opens Thursday.

Mayor Charles Brown, Police Captain Mason Conley and Patrolman Chester Smith were called as witnesses, when the Columbiana county grand jury opened a special session at Lisbon Thursday morning. At least three East Liverpool cases will be investigated.

Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley will ask that a first degree murder count will be returned against William Wolfe, East End clay miner, who is alleged to have shot and killed his boarding mistress, Mrs. Flora Dearth, Mulberry street restaurant owner, on the night of Oct. 3. Wolfe attempted suicide following the shooting of Mrs. Dearth, but recovered from a wound in the left jaw, although he suffered the loss of one eye.

Wolfe, at a preliminary hearing before Mayor Brown last week, when he was bound over to the grand jury, pleaded not guilty and denied any complicity in the crime. Police, who investigated the shooting, say the tragedy was the result of a property deal in which Wolfe recently had transferred some real estate to Mrs. Dearth.

Second Street Shooting.

An indictment will be sought against Ginard Robert, 42, Second street, who is alleged to have shot Lonnie Menardo, 38, and Ross Caruso, 40, in a quarrel at the corner of Second street and Peach alley Sunday night. Robert was bound over to the grand jury on a charge of shooting with intent to kill, his bond being fixed at $2,000.

Menardo, who suffered a bullet wound in the left breast, is convalescing at the City hospital. Caruso is on the road to recovery at his home, corner St. Clair avenue and Springfield street.

Charges of breaking and entering which have been placed against Fewson Stacke and Dale Brookes, East End youths, who have confessed to the looting of the Roller flour mill. Another charge against them has been filed by D. K. Leyda, Pennsylvania railroad detective.

Dana Brookes and Manning Bannfield, who are also alleged to have participated in a series of robberies with the other Brookes lad and young Stacey, have been held for the probable court, inasmuch as each had is under 18 years of age.

Christianity Keeps Hell Out of You, he Says.

Four Delegations are in Attendance at Tabernacle.

By T. T. JONES.

"Christianity's purpose is not entirely to protect you from going to hell ultimately but to keep hell out of you in life. Neither is it to vehicle you so much to heaven though it will eventually do that, but to give you heaven here and now." So affirmed Dr. W. E. Biederwolf at the Second and Washington street tabernacle on Wednesday night as he urged the saved to take God at his word and make the initial step that would guarantee them this boon.

Convinced of the need of making a start several persons came forward with the invitation given. Others, church men and women later joined them in the prayer service, which Rev. L. J. Davidson, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church led.

Four delegations were in attendance at the meeting. Chief among these was that from the London Supply Co., whose employees took the initiative to do so without, it was announced, a shop meeting having been held at the plant at all. For this reason at the instigation of Musical Director McKean they were given, a resounding cheer by the others in the audience.

The Knights of Malta, in imposing array, and the Dames of Malta, equally arresting in their appearance, rose in turn and were greeted by applause. "Everywhere that I have held meetings all over the United States, I have always found among the early contingents attending them the Knights of Malta," asserted Dr. Biederwolf in his words of greeting. "Your organization always favored an awakening of righteousness in a community. I know of your high ideals and some of the purposes for which you stand."

William M. Butler Named to Succeed Late Senator Lodge

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—William M. Butler, of New Bedford, chairman of the Republican national committee, today was appointed by Gov. Cox to succeed the late Senator Lodge in the United States senate. Under the appointment, Butler will serve until next state election two years in the future.

Butler first came into prominence as chairman of the Massachusetts state Republican committee and through his friendship with the then Governor Coolidge. Later President Coolidge selected him for chairman of the national Republican committee and leader of his campaign for re-election. He had for years been well known in Boston as a department store operator and through his various textile interests.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN P. HILL NOT GUILTY OF DRY LAW COUNT

Maryland Man is Acquitted of Volstead Law Violation.

WINE-CIDER CASE

Will Use Trial to Press Wine and Beer Bill.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 13.—After 20 hours' deliberation, the jury in the case of Congressman John Phillip Hill on trial in United States district court here on charges of violating the Volstead law, today brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Haggard and drawn after their long session, the jurymen, who were charged by Judge Morris E. Soper to determine whether or not wine and cider, admittedly manufactured by Congressman Hill, was "intoxicating in fact," filed into circuit court here at 10 o'clock this morning and exonerated the anti-Volsteadist on all six counts of the indictment, charging him with violating the dry law. The announcement, which was received by a crowd that extended to the corridors, and was greeted with an outburst of enthusiasm.

Congressman Hill immediately said he would use the trial and the rulings of Judge Soper to press a bill in congress to legalize the sale of light wines and beer.

Court's Ruling.

At the termination of the three days' hearing, Judge Soper had charged the jury to disregard the two extremes in definitions of intoxication which had been vouchsafed in the testimony. These were exemplified by that of Dr. Howard A. Kelly, local reformer and witness for the government, who had declared that any amount of alcohol taken into the human system produces a certain degree of intoxication, and on the other hand by the testimony of a witness for the defense, who had declared a dozen or two glasses of whisky were required to produce an effect upon him.

Earlier, Judge Soper had ruled that the one per cent clause in the Volstead act does not apply to home beverages and the jury was ordered to determine whether a reasonable amount of Congressman Hill's wine and cider would intoxicate. With this moot question, they retired to the jury room shortly before 2 o'clock yesterday.

Stresses Case's Importance.

Vivantly interested Baltimoreans, government officials and friends of Congressman Hill awaited the verdict until after midnight. After an hour's deliberation the jury asked for a copy of section 29 of the Volstead law, relating to home manufacture of cider and fruit juices. Two hours later it

Ballantine, Riddle and Brookes Report Campaign Expenses

Three more candidates for county offices at last Tuesday's general election certified their expense accounts to John W. Moore, clerk to the county election board, Thursday.

Frank Ballantine, Republican, Lisbon, who was successful in the race for clerk of courts, spent $206, while Lodge Riddle, Lisbon, seeking another term as probate judge, had an outlay of $263.94. Robert M. Brookes, of East Liverpool, unopposed for county prosecutor, expended $154, which represented a contribution to the county Republican committee. Lloyd Kirk, successful candidate for county surveyor, reported no expenditures.

The time limit for filing expense statements expires Friday midnight, ten days after the election.

The crossing is considered an extremely dangerous one. The view of the tracks is obstructed, and it was assumed that Farren had driven squarely in the path of the approaching train, which was traveling at a slow rate of speed, trainmen said. The corner of Harrison county, where the accident occurred will make an investigation.

THREE ROBBERS LOOT CHESTER BRIDGE MONEY DRAWER, THEN ESCAPE

Two Youths, Armed With Rifles, Command Tollkeeper George D. Swearingen, 60, to "Throw up Hands" as Pal Stands at Window to Pay Toll in Pennies.

RETURN $10 IN BAG AND LEAVE 40 CENTS FOR CHANGE WITH VICTIM

Burglars, for Second Time in About Year, Ransack Mrs. Bert Shay's Home, Riverview and North Streets, and Obtain $40 in Cash and Gold Watch and Silverware.

Marking the second tollhouse robbery here within a period of three weeks, three bandits, two of them armed with rifles, held up Tollkeeper George D. Swearingen, aged 60, on the East Liverpool-Chester bridge across the Ohio river at 1:30 o'clock Thursday morning, obtained $40 from the cash register, an automatic revolver from a nearby desk, cut the telephone wires to prevent a call for the police and made their escape.

The robbery, which bore the earmarks of the hold-up of Tollkeeper J. C. Nixon on the East Liverpool-Newell bridge on October 23, when $83 was taken, followed the looting for the second time within a year of the home of Mrs. Bert Shay, Riverview and North streets, which occurred between 7:30 and 11 o'clock Wednesday evening. The burglars, who entered the Shay home through a screened window, fled with $40 in cash, a gold watch and a large quantity of silverware.

The East Liverpool-Chester bridge tollhouse hold-up followed the approach of three youths, each believed to be between 18 and 20 years of age, from the West Virginia side of the river. One of the trio stopped at the tollhouse window and handed Swearingen fifteen pennies as bridge toll for the group. As the tollkeeper was counting the money, two of the bandits opened the door of the tollhouse, stepped inside and, pointing rifles at the astonished bridge worker, commanded, "Hands up."

Replace Money Bag, Leave Change

Swearingen complied with the order, and as the two robbers still pointed their guns in a menacing manner, their confederate joined them. Noticing a key, which had dropped to the floor, he unlocked the cash register and took charge of its contents, about $40 in bills of various denominations and change. In the register also was a bank bag which contained $10.

"Don't take that money bag; it does not belong to me or the company," said Swearingen to the bandits. The robbers then replaced it in the cash register.

"Don't take all the change," sallied Swearingen, who was playing for time in the hope that a foot passenger would come along to render assistance. Without answering, the bandits left 40 cents on the counter.

Telephone Wires Cut.

They then picked up an automatic revolver, which was in a nearby desk, and one of them pulled a penknife from his trousers pocket and cut the telephone wire.

The robbers, without comment, hastily fled toward Third street.

A few minutes after the robbery, a pedestrian reached the tollhouse. The tollkeeper told him the story of the holdup and requested that he notify the police.

Police Captain Mason Conley hurried to the tollhouse to make an investigation. Chief of Police Hugh McDermott, who was off duty Wednesday night,

G. S. Hoag, vice president and field secretary for the Lincoln Highway association, passed through East Liverpool Thursday enroute to New York, his last trip over the route this year. Mr. Hoag reached the city Wednesday afternoon and left for Pittsburgh Thursday afternoon.

He denied any possibility of the official route of the Lincoln highway being changed so as to pass through Youngstown, New Castle and Butler, a campaign for which is being conducted by the Youngstown Automobile club.

"The only change in the present routing of the Lincoln highway through this section which will be considered is the route from East Liverpool via Chester, into Pittsburgh through the Southside," said Mr. Hoag. "The association is interested in this route, for it is not only shorter than any other road, but it eliminates a lot of congestion and also gets away from the fog which prevails along the river communities."

Kelly, local reformer and witness for the government, who had declared that any amount of alcohol taken into the human system produces a certain degree of intoxication, and on the other hand by the testimony of a witness for the defense, who had declared a dozen or two glasses of whiskey were required to produce an effect upon him.

Earlier, Judge Soper had ruled that the one per cent clause in the Volstead act does not apply to home beverages and the jury was ordered to determine whether a reasonable amount of Congressman Hill's wine and cider would intoxicate. With this moot question, they retired to the jury room shortly before 2 o'clock yesterday.

Stresses Case's Importance.

Vitality interested Baltimoreans, government officials and friends of Congressman Hill awaited the verdict until after midnight. After an hour's deliberation the jury asked for a copy of section 29 of the Volstead law, relating to home manufacture of cider and fruit juices. Two hours later it

Ballantine, Riddle And Brookes Report Campaign Expenses

Three more candidates for county offices at last Tuesday's general election certified their expense accounts to John W. Moore, clerk to the county election board, Thursday.

Frank Ballantine, Republican, Lisbon, who was successful in the race for clerk of courts, spent $206, while Lodge Riddle, Lisbon, seeking another term as probate judge, had an outlay of $253.94. Robert M. Brookes, of East Liverpool, unopposed for county prosecutor, expended $154, which represented a contribution to the county Republican committee. Lloyd Kirk, successful candidate for county surveyor, reported no expenditures.

The time limit for filing expense statements expires Friday midnight, ten days after the election.

THREE ROBBERS LOOT CHESTER BRIDGE MONEY DRAWER, THEN ESCAPE

Two Youths, Armed With Rifles, Command Tollkeeper George D. Swearingen, 60, to "Throw up Hands" as Pal Stands at Window to Pay Toll in Pennies.

RETURN $10 IN BAG AND LEAVE 40 CENTS FOR CHANGE WITH VICTIM

Burglars, for Second Time in About Year, Ransack Mrs. Bert Shay's Home, Riverview and North Streets, and Obtain $40 in Cash and Gold Watch and Silverware.

Marking the second tollhouse robbery here within a period of three weeks, three bandits, two of them armed with rifles, held up Tollkeeper George D. Swearingen, aged 60, on the East Liverpool-Chester bridge across the Ohio river at 1:30 o'clock Thursday morning, obtained $40 from the cash register, an automatic revolver from a nearby desk, cut the telephone wires to prevent a call for the police and made their escape.

The robbery, which bore the earmarks of the hold-up of Tollkeeper J. C. Nixon on the East Liverpool-Newell bridge on October 23, when $83 was taken, followed the looting for the second time within a year of the home of Mrs. Bert Shay, Riverview and North streets, which occurred between 7:30 and 11 o'clock Wednesday evening. The burglars, who entered the Shay home through a screened window, fled with $40 in cash, a gold watch and a large quantity of silverware.

The East Liverpool-Chester bridge tollhouse hold-up followed the approach of three youths, each believed to be between 13 and 20 years of age, from the West Virginia side of the river. One of the trio stopped at the tollhouse window and handed Swearingen fifteen pennies as bridge toll for the group. As the tollkeeper was counting the money, two of the bandits opened the door of the tollhouse, stepped inside and, pointing rifles at the astonished bridge worker, commanded, "Hands up."

Replace Money Bag, Leave Change.

Swearingen complied with the order, and as the two robbers still pointed their guns in a menacing manner, their confederate joined them. Noticing a key, which had dropped to the floor, he unlocked the cash register and took charge of its contents, about $40 in bills of various denominations and change. In the register also was a bank bag which contained $10.

"Don't take that money bag; it does not belong to me or the company," said Swearingen to the bandits.

The robbers then replaced it in the cash register. "Don't take all the change," said Swearingen, who was playing for time in the hope that a foot passenger would come along to render assistance. Without answering, the bandits left 40 cents on the counter.

Telephone Wires Cut.

They then picked up an automatic revolver, which was in a nearby desk, and one of them pulled a penknife from his trousers pocket and cut the telephone wires.

The robbers, without comment, hastily fled toward Third street.

A few minutes after the robbery, a pedestrian reached the tollhouse. The tollkeeper told him the story of the holdup and requested that he notify the police.

Police Captain Mason Conley hurried to the tollhouse to make an investigation.

Chief of Police Hugh McDermott, who was off duty Wednesday night,

FATHER AND FOUR CHILDREN KILLED IN AUTO-TRAIN CRASH AT GRADE CROSSING; MOTHER MAY DIE

URICHVILLE, O., Nov. 13.—The bodies of Earl Farren, 36, and his four children, killed last night in a crash at the Polen crossing, about a mile east of Philadelphia Roads, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, were being prepared for burial today, while Mrs. Earl Farren, the wife and mother, suffering from cuts and bruises about the head and shoulders, nervous shock and possible internal injuries was in Twin City hospital at Dennison. Her condition is considered extremely critical.

The dead are:

EARL FARREN, 36, driver of the automobile.

CLYDE FARREN, 16, a student in Dennison High school.

TREVA FARREN, 13.

BERNARD FARREN, 10.

KENNETH FARREN, 6.

Bodies Struck Along Track.

The bodies were picked up along the right of way of the railroad by trainmen, and carried to Dennison by the westbound accommodation train, which struck Farren's car at the crossing. The father was found near the wreckage of the machine. A short distance away the bodies of three of his children were found huddled together. The other was nearby. Mrs. Farren was conscious.

The family had driven to a nearby store and gas filling station to purchase supplies and were returning home.

The crossing where the accident occurred is not a public highway but is located on railroad property.

The crossing is considered an extremely dangerous one. The view of the tracks is obstructed, and it was assumed that Farren had driven squarely in the path of the approaching train, which was traveling at a slow rate of speed, trainmen said.

The coroner of Harrison county, where the accident occurred will make an investigation.

DRAFT REPORT ON NILES RIOT

Charge Klan Formed Police Force Under Old Statute.

WARREN, Nov. 12.—Repeal of an old statute, enacted by the Ohio legislature before the Civil war to curb horse stealing, and carried into the latest codification of Ohio laws as section 10199 of the Ohio general code, will be recommended by the investigators of the recent Klan and anti-Klan rioting in their report to Gov. Donahoe to be filed today or tomorrow. Prosecutor Harvey A. Burgess said here today.

Burgess said that under the authority given in this statute the Ku Klux Klan had organized their own police force and that these men had been informed that they possessed police powers and were entitled to carry concealed weapons.

"This emphatically is not the case," the prosecutor declared. While admitting that the law was broad in its powers, and gave authority to members of organizations formed under its provisions to pursue "horse thieves and other criminals" into any county in the state, Burgess said there was no authority in its provisions for these men to bear arms when concealed. Whether or not he would ask for the indictment of persons arrested carrying weapons during the riot of a week ago Saturday he refused to say.

Columbiana County Force.

"I do not care to say what I'll do," Burgess said. "I greatly prefer to let my actions speak for me."

The prosecutor declared that under this old law, armed organizations were functioning in Trumbull, Mahoning, Jefferson, Columbiana and probably other counties throughout the state.

"We have developed tangible evidence to support this view," he asserted. "Klan organizers have invited many men to join and have secured fees totaling $17.35 for membership in this so-called 'State Police' body."

The investigators were about ready to draft their report. Meanwhile feeling at Niles was said to have completely died down, and normal conditions in the life of the little industrial city had been restored.

ent the business women of the city. From store and office this delegation was enlisted. Marching from the First Methodist Episcopal church where, previous to the meeting they enjoyed a banquet, they occupied reserved seats in the center section except those who resumed their nightly places with the choir. They were given a most cordial reception.

"Business women everywhere," declared Dr. Biederwolf, "deserve great credit for their sterling character frequently under quite adverse conditions. It is with genuine delight we welcome you here."

Banquet Program.

After an inviting menu which was served them in the First Methodist Episcopal church banquet room, the following program was enjoyed:

Vocal solo—"My Task" by Ashford, Miss Wilda Warner.

Piano solo—"Woodland Whispers" by Bramgard, Miss Helen Welch.

Vocal solo—"The Lost Sheep," by Walter Waggoner, Mrs. Elizabeth Baker.

In conclusion, following a brief talk by Miss Wilma Davis on "The Rainbow," Mrs. Baker sang a gospel hymn by Charles Gabriel, "I Know."

The evening invocation was made by John F. Myler, of Newell, Mr. McEwan sang "Pass it On" and before Dr. Biederwolf began to preach all lights were dimmed and those on the hanging cross over the platform turned on as choir and audience sang "The Rock of Ages."

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon was based on the incident of the man healed at the pool of Bethesda, who was told to "rise, take up thy bed and walk."

"To them that obey God will vouchsafe eternal life," averred the evangelist, "but they must put to the test His promises and take the initial step, 'rise,' then, having done this with full faith in their heavenly father, they are to 'take up their beds'; that is, get away from their former sins and evil companions and 'walk' which infers the presence of active Christian work, thus developing their Christian character and insuring a minimum of danger in again yielding to sin."

Dr. Biederwolf stressed the need for taking up the bed as one rose for "if you have faith enough you will not need it anymore. Backsliders usually make provision for a relapse when they take the cure and keep their former bad habits. There is nothing sadder than to witness a soul touched with God's Sun going back to recline on its old bed of sin."

To illustrate how the human unit so admirably made strong in faith slips through temptation and is lost, he gave a most realistic description of the launching of a ship and its subsequent wreck at sea.

"Such souls," he said "too frequently did not take up their beds but, like a reformed drunkard, who persisted in hitching his horse near his favorite saloon, fell back into his old habits. You must quit once and for all your old habits to insure permanency in the new life, begin by rising and walking."

The evangelist told how many, starting the Christian life, wanted to retain some of their former activities. He aroused a laugh when he told of the cigarette smoker who wrote him: "Will smoking cigarettes hurt the brain?" He replied, he said, "I don't know, having never seen any one with brains smoking them."

"But when you have 'risen and taken up your bed,' you must walk too. You must carry on by working and not be slothful in Christ's kingdom. The best way for some East Liverpool Christians to sing it would seem to me is 'Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Jesus! Christ expects us to serve Him, to work in His vineyard, suffer perhaps and undergo sacrifice. This is charac-

Court of Appeals Hands Down Rulings In Salem Cases

The appellate court Thursday at Lisbon granted Thomas Cadwallader, Salem, a permanent injunction, restraining the county treasurer from collecting the new tax from him. The action was originally filed against W. R. Phillips, then county treasurer, following Cadwallader's arrest on a liquor charge. The court overruled the county's motion for a new trial.

The court also affirmed the judgment of the Salem mayor's court and common pleas court in the assessment of a fine against Earl Ritchie of Salem, one of the so-called "card men," who was charged with violating the prohibition law.

Registered Beagle Owned by Newell Man Wins Prize

"Newell Black Jack" a registered Beagle hound, owned by Edwin Wells Jr., of Newell Heights, captured second prize in the National Beagle Club Trail, conducted at Aldie, Va., this week.

Hundreds of dogs were entered in this test, which is said to be very severe. First prize was won by an entry from Birchbrae, New York. The trial was conducted with dogs running in pairs, the Newell entry running with a dog from Michigan, only to lose out in the next contest with a New York entrant.

Mr. Wells' dog was taken to Virginia by Dr. E. J. State, local dog fancier, and Donald Hull.

ter made and the world lifted up to God. Here in East Liverpool there is much to do and you should aid in the work necessary."

Afternoon Sermon.

Discussing the Social Activities of Lot and His Wife, in the afternoon, Dr. Biederwolf compared the differences between the spiritual heights of the plain of Mamre in which with his uncle, Abraham, he dwelt in tents and the immoral and unrighteous depths to which he sank after assuming the standards of life in Sodom and Gomorrah.

"The pitiless curse of fortune seeking had stifled his better nature," he said. "Gold had shut out his vision of God."

The evangelist pictured the patriarch's life from intent to mansion and finally left him where the final Bible account of him does in a cave where his latter end must have been in sad contrast to his former better days.

"When you leave God out of your life and run it yourself you will run it into the dirt every time," he asserted, "and that is what Lot did, his final dwelling place being a cave. He learned what many East Liverpool church members should know: They cannot serve God and the world at the same time."

Dr. Biederwolf averred that Lot in passing up God for the world won wealth, social distinction and political preferment, but in so doing the things he lost were the intimate spiritual companionship with Abraham, his God-fearing uncle, that with his real friends, finally his perhaps ill-gotten wealth, his opportunity for service for God, his influence with men and his own children, his family as his wife turned to salt and eventually his confidence in God.

"Was it worth it?" the evangelist asked. "What availed him finally the temporary hold on power, riches and the social acclaim? How very much better was his life on the plains with God, Abraham and his real friends than the life he ultimately took up with its later losses and a rocky dwelling place and no hope for a future!"

"People who decide to do as they please while leaving God out of the reckoning are following Lot rather than Abraham."

Following a period of song and preaching the sermon Mr. McEwan sang "Teach Me How to Do My Master's Will."

Senator Borah Urges Extraordinary Meet Of Congress in 1925

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Senator Wm. E. Borah of Idaho, who will succeed the late Senator Lodge as chairman of the foreign relations committee, expressed the belief today that an extraordinary session of congress should be called after March 4.

Borah conferred with President Coolidge at the White House on a number of legislative matters, including a possible special session.

Borah took the position that the new congress should start legislating just as soon as possible after it was elected instead of waiting until shortly before another election.

Among the matters which he thought should be given immediate consideration were agricultural problems, also pointing out that the administration's world court proposal and any number of other questions were pending.

The conference opened Monday and will continue until Saturday. Dr. Fraser is expected home Sunday.

Congress May Defer Tax Cut and Farm Relief Legislation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Tax reduction and farm relief legislation are not likely to be issues at the coming session of congress, it developed today.

President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon have made it clear they do not expect to press any administration tax measures during the winter.

The agriculture commission, recently appointed by President Coolidge to recommend farm legislation, is not expected to complete its work in time for congress to give consideration to the legislation at the coming session.

Representative Martin Madden, of Illinois, and Representative Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, are active candidates for the speakership.

Tollhouse Bandits

took up the inquiry early Thursday. He expressed the opinion that it was an amateur job and had been committed by the bandits who robbed the East Liverpool-Newell bridge tollhouse.

Rifles, carried by the tollhouse bandits, were stolen from the Chester Cash Hardware, Virginia avenue, Chester. It developed early Thursday afternoon, Harry Mercer, owner of the store, reported three 22-caliber rifles, several boxes of shells, three hunting knives, several penknives and a number of flashlights to have been taken. Two locks in the front door had been picked.

The description of the robbers in each job tallied. They were youthful and ordinarily dressed, but none of them were an overcoat.

Shay Home Robbery.

The robbery at the Shay home occurred while Mrs. Shay was attending services at the tabernacle. The culprits cut a screen in a rear window which had been left unlocked, the police found upon investigation.

Drawing the window blinds, they turned on the lights while they ransacked the house. Two $20 bills were taken from a pocketbook. In another room was found a box of jewelry. The thieves took a lady's small-sized watch, but left a larger watch, which Mrs. Shay had kept since the death of her husband, Bert Shay, Northside drugist. The robbers left the house through the rear door.

Captain Conley investigated the robbery Wednesday night, while Chief of Police McDermott continued the probe Thursday morning.

The Shay home was looted last February 1, during the owner's absence, a $700 diamond ring containing two stones, a mesh bag and $75 in money being obtained by the thieves.

Kills Woman, Then Himself as Threat Of Arrest is Made

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 12.—Choosing death rather than prison when threatened with arrest for alleged forgery, Peter Leonard, 33, last night before firing a bullet through his own head, killed Mrs. Katherine Hauser, 50, pretty divorcee. The woman's three children slept through the tragedy in an adjoining room.

Congressman Hill

asked for a dictionary. At each request the impatient crowd believed the verdict would soon follow but as the hours passed without result, it became more and more evident that the deadlock was not to be broken.

Having survived the early morning hours, when man's resistance is said to be weakest, it was generally believed today that neither side would make a last-minute surrender. Before leaving the courtroom late yesterday Judge Soper had instructed the jury to bring in a sealed verdict if they could come to an agreement. Later he returned to learn if this had been accomplished and again returned to his home.

Judge Soper had gone to great length to impress the importance of the case upon the jury. He said the fact, borne out by the evidence, that the defendant had been active in connection with the law, should be left out of consideration.

The trial was the result of a deliberate campaign on the part of Congressman Hill to force court action and test the validity of section 29 of the Volstead Act, which he said, was discrimination in favor of the farmer against the city man in the manufacture of cider.

Congressman Hill's popularity in Maryland was attested November 4, when he was re-elected by the greatest majority in the Maryland elections.

The length of the time required by the jury to arrive at a verdict was a real surprise here. It was said the final member of the opposition to acquittal succumbed shortly before 7 a. m. today.

No Change in Policy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Congressman John Phillip Hill's "home brew victory" won before a jury in Baltimore federal court, win of result in any chance in the present policy of the prohibition department to ferret out and prosecute home brewers, who exceed the legal alcoholic limit in their brewing. It was asserted today by department officials.

From the attitude of the department of justice and the prohibition bureau, it appeared that the Hill decision will be to all intents and purposes "ignored" by the prohibition enforcement authorities.

Attorney General Stone said it was extremely unlikely the government would take any appeal in the case.

Double Murder

suit, police headquarters were called after the shooting and a voice said: "If you get a report of shooting in East 97th street, pay no attention to it. The noise was made by the exhaust of an automobile."

Mrs. Rosen, however, asleep in the home, was aroused by the shot, and heard men run after the double killing. She called police.

Police, through the man now being questioned, hope to be able to establish the identity of the band believed responsible for the murder.

Arrests Expected.

Joe Lee, said to be Rosen's business partner in recent profitable ventures, was questioned at length by detectives as to Rosen's business relations and his friends and possible enemies. Detectives said that valuable clues had been developed and that arrests might follow shortly.

The murderers drove away from the Rosen home in a gray touring car of an expensive make. Thus far no witnesses have been found to furnish descriptions, but a number saw the car speed away following the shooting.

Adelson and his wife had arrived here Sunday for a visit at the Rosen home. They were to have been guests at a wedding in the family to be celebrated tomorrow. Mrs. Adelson was reported prostrated today.

While a valuable diamond stickpin was taken from Rosen's body, police do not believe robbery to have been the motive for the crime. Money and valuables on Adelson's body were untouched.

Gangland's Guns Bark.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Gangland's guns barked for the first time today in reprisal for the killing of Dean O'Bannon.

The victim was William Shields, 32, shot down in a South Side restaurant by Joseph Carville, underworld character, his breakfast companion.

The shooting ended an argument which police investigating the affair believe may have centered about the O'Bannon slaying.

But of this, Shields, at a hospital, refused to speak. Bying he lapsed into the silence of the underworld, refused to name his assailant or to give police any information which might aid in an arrest.

Meanwhile police are holding Jules Portuguese, 28, West Side gangster and Hi Jacker, in connection with the O'Bannon killing. Portuguese, the owner of an automobile answering the description of the car in which O'Bannon's assailants made their escape. The arrest, police said today, is the first definite step toward the solution of the murder.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Transactions continued on a heavy scale in the stock market today. Some profit-taking near the opening accounted for slight irregularity in Industrials and Railroad stocks.

Money and industrial reports continued to favor the constructive side of the market and buying orders poured into Wall Street from every section of the country. Profit taking sales were easily absorbed.

Oil stocks took up the rally which was in progress at Wednesday's close. Another decline of 15,000 barrels in Daily Crude Oil Production and urgent bidding for Crude Oil at premiums in the principal producing fields attracted considerable attention to the oil stocks and the best prices on the recovery were scored today by Maryland, Cossden and other prominent independent oil shares.

Motors and shipping stocks were also buoyant; Mack Trucks, up four points to 105 1/4, being the leader in the former group; With Studebaker, Chandler and Maxwell scoring slight gains. Marine Preferred and American International pushed forward to the best levels for the movement.

DRAFT REPORT ON NILES RIOT

Charge Klan Formed Police Force Under Old Statute.

WARREN, Nov. 12.—Repeal of an old statute, enacted by the Ohio legislature before the Civil war to curb horse stealing, and carried into the latest codification of Ohio laws as section 10199 of the Ohio general code, will be recommended by the investigators of the recent Klan and anti-Klan rioting in their report to Gov. Donahoe to be filed today or tomorrow, Prosecutor Harvey A. Burgess said here today.

Burgess said that under the authority given in this statute the Ku Klux Klan had organized their own police force and that these men had been informed that they possessed police powers and were entitled to carry concealed weapons.

"This emphatically is not the case," the prosecutor declared. While admitting that the law was broad in its powers, and gave authority to members of organizations formed under its provisions to pursue "thieves and other criminals" into any county in the state, Burgess said there was no authority in its provisions for these men to bear arms when concealed. Whether or not he would ask for the indictment of persons arrested carrying weapons during the riot of a week ago Saturday he refused to say.

Columbiana County Force.

"I do not care to say what I'll do," Burgess said. "I greatly prefer to let my actions speak for me."

The prosecutor declared that under this old law, and organizations were functioning in Trumbull, Mahoning, Jefferson, Columbiana and probably other counties throughout the state.

"We have developed tangible evidence to support this view," he asserted. "Klan organizers have investigated many men to join and have secured fees totaling $17.35 for membership in this so-called 'State Police' body."

The investigators were about ready to draft their report. Meanwhile feeling at Niles was said to have completely died down, and normal conditions in the life of the little industrial city had been restored.

ent the business women of the city. From store and office this delegation was enlisted. Marching from the First Methodist Episcopal church where, previous to the meeting they enjoyed a banquet, they occupied reserved seats in the center section except those who resumed their nightly places with the choir. They were given a most cordial reception.

"Business women everywhere," declared Dr. Biederwolf, "deserve great credit for their sterling character frequently under quite adverse conditions. It is with genuine delight we welcome you here."

Banquet Program.

After an inviting menu which was served them in the First Methodist Episcopal church banquet room, the following program was enjoyed:

Vocal solo—"My Task" by Ashford, Miss Wilda Warner.

Piano solo—"Woodland Whispers" by Bramberg, Miss Helen Welch.

Vocal solo—"The Lost Sheep," by Walter Waggoner, Mrs. Elizabeth Baker.

In conclusion, following a brief talk by Miss Wilma Davis on "The Rainbow," Mrs. Baker sang a gospel hymn by Charles Gabriel, "I Know."

The evening invocation was made by John F. Myler, of Newell, Mr. McEwan sang "Pass It On" and before Dr. Biederwolf began to preach all lights were dimmed and those on the hanging cross over the platform turned on as choir and audience sang "The Rock of Ages."

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon was based on the incident of the man healed of the pool of Bethesda, who was told to "rise, take up thy bed and walk."

"To them that obey God will vouchsafe eternal life," averred the evangelist, "but they must put to the test His promises and take the initial step, 'rise.' Then, having done this with full faith in their heavenly father, they are to 'take up their beds,' that is, get away from their former sins and evil companions and 'walk' which infers the doing of active Christian work, thus developing their Christian character and insuring a minimum of danger in again yielding to sin."

Dr. Biederwolf stressed the need for taking up the bed as one rose for "if you have faith enough you will not need any more." Backsliders usually make provision for a release when they take the cure and keep their former beds handy. There is nothing sadder than to witness a soul touched with God's Sun going back to recline on its old bed of sin."

To illustrate how the human unit so admirably made strong in faith slips through temptation and is lost he gave a most realistic description of the launching of a ship and its subsequent wreck at sea.

"Such souls," he said "too frequently do not take up their beds but, like a reformed drunkard, who persisted in hitching his horse near his favorite saloon, fell back into his old habits. You must quit once and for all your old habits to insure permanency in the new life, begin by rising and walking."

The evangelist told how many, starting the Christian life wanted to retain some of their former activities. He aroused a laugh when he told of the cigarette smoker who wrote him: "Will smoking cigarettes hurt the brain? He replied, he said, "I don't know, having never seen any one with brains smoking them."

"But when you have risen and taken up your bed," you must walk too. You must carry on by working and not be slothful in Christ's kingdom. The best song for some East Liverpool Christians to sing it would seem to me is 'Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Jesus.' Work in His vineyard, suffer perhaps and undergo sacrifice. This is charac-

Court of Appeals Hands Down Rulings In Salem Cases

The appellate court Thursday at Lisbon granted Thomas Cadwallader, Salem, a permanent injunction, restraining the county treasurer from collecting the Dow tax from him. The action was originally filed against W. R. Phillips, then county treasurer, following Cadwallader's arrest on a liquor charge. The court overruled the county's motion for a new trial. The court also affirmed the judgment of the Salem mayor's court and common pleas court in the assessment of a fine against Earl Ritchie of Salem, one of the so-called "card men," who was charged with violating the prohibition law.

Registered Beagle Owned by Newell Man Wins Prize

"Newell Black Jack" a registered Beagle hound, owned by Edwin Wells Jr., of Newell Heights, captured second prize in the National Beagle Club Trial, conducted at Aldie, Va., this week.

Hundreds of dogs were entered in this test, which is said to be very severe. First prize was won by an entry from Birchbrae, New York. The trial was conducted with dogs running in pairs, the Newell entry running with and defeating another dog from Michigan, only to lose out in the next contest with a New York entrant.

Mr. Wells' dog was taken to Virginia by Dr. E. J. State, local dog fancier, and Donald Hull.

ter made and the world lifted up its head. Here in East Liverpool there is much to do and you should aid in the work necessary."

Afternoon Sermon.

Discussing the Social Activities of Lot and His Wife, in the afternoon, Dr. Biederwolf compared the differences between the spiritual heights of the plain of Mamre in which with his uncle, Abraham, he dwelt in tents and the immoral and unrighteous depths to which he sank after assuming the standards of life in Sodom and Gomorrah.

"The pitiless curse of fortune seeking had stifled his better nature," he said. "Gold had shut out his vision of God."

The evangelist pictured the patriarch's life from intent to mansion and finally left him where the final Bible account of him does in a cave where his latter end must have been in sad contrast to his former better days.

"When you leave God out of your life and run it yourself you will run it into the dirt every time," he asserted, "and that is what Lot did, his final dwelling place being a cave. He learned what many East Liverpool church members should know: They cannot serve God and the world at the same time."

Dr. Biederwolf averred that Lot in passing up God for the world was wealth, social distinction and political preferment, but in so doing the things he lost were the intimate spiritual companionship with Abraham, his God fearing uncle, that with his real friends, finally his perhaps ill gotten wealth, his opportunity for service for God, his influence with men and his own children, his family as his wife turned to salt and eventually his confidence in God.

"Was it worth it?" the evangelist asked. "What availed him finally the temporary hold on power, riches and the social acclaim? How very much better was his life on the plains with God, Abraham and his real friends than the life he ultimately took up with its later losses and a rocky dwelling place and no hope for a future!"

"People who decide to do as they please while leaving God out of the reckoning are following Lot rather than Abraham."

Following a period of song and preaching the sermon Mr. McEwan sang "Teach Me How to do My Master's Will."

Senator Borah Urges Extraordinary Meeting Of Congress in 1925

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Senator Wm. E. Borah of Idaho, who will succeed the late Senator Lodge as chairman of the foreign relations committee, expressed the belief today that an extraordinary session of congress should be called after March 4.

Borah conferred with President Coolidge at the White House on a number of legislative matters, including a possible special session.

Borah took the position that the new congress should start legislating just as soon as possible after it was elected instead of waiting until shortly before another election.

Among the matters which he thought should begiven immediate consideration were agricultural problems, also pointing out that the administration's world court proposal and any number of other questions were pending.

Dr. John Fraser And Other County Men at State Meet

Three Columbiana county health commissioners are attending a state health conference, which is being held in the Elks' home at Columbus this week. Those from this county attending the conference include Dr. John Fraser, East Liverpool city health commissioner; Dr. M. C. Carr, Wellsville health commissioner, and Dr. T. T. Church, county health commissioner, Salem.

Dr. Dick, Chicago physician; Dr. Stanley H. Osborn of Connecticut, and Dr. Henry Vaughn of Detroit are among some of the prominent figures in the medical profession who will speak at the conference. Papers and discussions relative to prevention of scarlet fever and diphtheria will be featured.

The conference opened Monday and will continue until Saturday. Dr. Fraser is expected home Sunday.

Congress May Defer Tax Cut and Farm Relief Legislation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Tax reduction and farm relief legislation are not likely to be issues at the coming session of congress, it developed today.

President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon have made it clear they do not expect to press any administration tax measures during the winter.

The agriculture commission, recently appointed by President Coolidge to recommend farm legislation, is not expected to complete its work in time for congress to give consideration to the legislation at the coming session.

Burton Not in Race For Speaker; Will "Answer, if Called"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Representative Theodore Burton, of Ohio, said today that he was not a candidate for speaker of the house, but that he would "answer, if called."

Representative Martin Madden, of Illinois, and Representative Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, are active candidates for the speakership.

took up the inquiry early Thursday. He expressed the opinion that it was an amateur job and had been committed by the bandits who robbed the East Liverpool-Newell bridge tollhouse.

Rifles, carried by the tollhouse bandits, were stolen from the Chester Cash Hardware, Virginia avenue, Chester, it developed early Thursday afternoon. Harry Mercer, owner of the store, reported three 25-caliber rifles, several boxes of shells, three hunting knives, several penknives and a number of flashlights to have been taken. Two locks in the front door had been picked.

The description of the robbers in each job tallied. They were youthful and ordinarily dressed, but none of them wore an overcoat.

Shay Home Robbery.

The robbery at the Shay home occurred while Mrs. Shay was attending services at the tabernacle. The culprits cut a screen in a rear window which had been left unlocked, the police found upon investigation.

Drawing the window blinds, they turned on the lights while they ransacked the house. Two $20 bills were taken from a pocketbook. In another room was found a box of jewelry. The thieves took a lady's small-sized watch, but left a larger watch, which Mrs. Shay had kept since the death of her husband, Bert Shay, Northside druggist. The robbers left the house through the rear door.

Captain Conley investigated the robbery Wednesday night, while Chief of Police McDermott continued the probe Thursday morning.

The Shay home was looted last February 1, during the owner's absence, a $700 diamond ring containing two stones, a mesh bag and $75 in money being obtained by the thieves.

Kills Woman, Then Himself as Arrest is Made

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 13.—Choosing death rather than prison when threatened with arrest for alleged forgery, Peter Leonard, 33, last night before firing a bullet through his own head, killed Mrs. Katherine Hauser, 30, pretty divorcee. The woman's three children slept through the tragedy in an adjoining room.

asked for a dictionary. At each request the impatient crowd believed the verdict would soon follow but as the hours passed without result, it became more and more evident that the deadlock was not to be broken.

Having survived the early morning hours, when man's resistance is said to be weakest, it was generally believed today that neither side would make a last-minute surrender. Before leaving the courtroom late yesterday Judge Soper had instructed the jury to bring in a sealed verdict if they could come to an agreement. Later he returned to learn if this had been accomplished and again returned to his home.

Judge Soper had gone to great length to impress the importance of the case upon the jury. He said the fact, borne out by the evidence, that the defendant had been active in connection with the dry law, should be left out of consideration.

Test of Volstead Act.

The trial was the result of a deliberate campaign on the part of Congressman Hill to force court action and test the validity of section 29 of the Volstead Act, which he said, was discrimination in favor of the farmer against the city man in the manufacture of cider.

Congressman Hill's popularity in Maryland was attested November 4, when he was re-elected by the greatest majority in the Maryland elections.

The length of the time required by the jury to arrive at a verdict was a great surprise here. It was said the final member of the opposition to acquittal succumbed shortly before 7 a. m. today.

No Change in Policy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Congressman John Philip Hill's "home brew victory" won before a jury in Baltimore federal court, win of result in any change in the present policy of the prohibition department to ferret out and prosecute home brewers, who exceed the legal alcoholic limit in their brewing. It was asserted today by department officials.

From the attitude of the department of justice and the prohibition bureau, it appeared that the Hill decision will be to all intents and purposes "ignored" by the prohibition enforcement authorities.

Attorney General Stone said it was extremely unlikely the government would take any appeal in the case.

suit, police headquarters were called after the shooting and a voice said: "If you get a report of shooting in East 97th street, pay no attention to it. The noise was made by the exhaust of an automobile."

Mrs. Rosen, however, asleep in the home, was aroused by the shots, and heard men run after the double killing. She called police.

Police, through the man now being questioned, hope to be able to establish the identity of the band believed responsible for the murder.

Arrests Expected.

Joe Lee, said to be Rosen's business partner in recent profitable ventures, was questioned at length by detectives as to Rosen's business relations and his friends and possible enemies.

Detectives said that valuable clues had been developed and that arrests might follow shortly.

The murderers drove away from the Rosen home in a gray touring car of an expensive make. Thus far no witnesses have been found to furnish descriptions, but a number saw the car speed away following the shooting.

Adelson and his wife had arrived here Sunday for a visit at the Rosen home. They were to have been guests at a wedding in the family to be celebrated tomorrow. Mrs. Adelson was reported prostrated today.

While a valuable diamond stickpin was taken from Rosen's body, police do not believe robbery to have been the motive for the crime. Money and valuables on Adelson's body were untouched.

Gangland's Guns Bark.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Gangland's guns barked for the first time today in reprisal for the killing of Dean O'Bannon.

The victim was William Shields, 32, shot down in a South Side restaurant by Joseph Carville, underworld character, his breakfast companion.

The shooting ended an argument which police investigating the affair believe may have centered about the O'Bannon slaying.

But of this, Shields, at a hospital, refused to speak. Dying he lapsed into the silence of the underworld, refused to name his assailant or to give police any information which might aid in an arrest.

Meanwhile police are holding James Portuagaise, 28, West Side gangster and Hi Jacker, in connection with the O'Bannon killing. Portuagaise, they say, is the owner of an automobile in which O'Bannon's assailants made their escape. The arrest, police said today, is the first definite step toward the solution of the murder.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Transactions continued on a heavy scale in the stock market today. Some profit-taking near the opening accounted for slight irregularity in industrial and railroad stocks.

Money and industrial reports continued to favor the constructive side of the market and buying orders poured into Wall Street from every section of the country. Profit taking sales were easily absorbed.

Oil stocks took up the rally which was in progress at Wednesday's close. Another decline of 15,000 barrels in Daily Crude Oil Production and urgent bidding for Crude Oil at premiums in the principal producing fields attracted considerable attention to the oil stocks and the best prices on the recovery were scored today by Marland, Cosden and other prominent independent oil shares.

Motors and shipping stocks were also buoyant; Mack Trucks, up four points to 105 1/4, being the leader in the former group; With Studebaker, Chandler and Maxwell scoring slight gains. Marine Preferred and American International pushed forward to the best levels for the movement.

Headlong movements in high prices industrial and specialty stocks again featured the market. Cast Iron Pipe was comparatively quiet, but General Electric moved up to 27 1/2 for a gain of six points; Sears Roebuck gained 4 at 134, a new high for the year; American Can 1 1/4 at 149 1/4; Du Pont 1 1/4 at 130 1/4; American Sugar added 4 points to yesterday's gains and at 48 had recorded a gain of 12 points from last week's low. New York Air Brake featured the low priced equipment stocks with a gain of 3 points to a new high at 48 1/4. Money renewed at 2 per cent.

PRISONERS PAY HEAVY FINES

Quartet of Italians are Released From Jail.

Having made arrangements to pay fines assessed by Mayor James S. Barnes, four Italians, one a resident of this city, arrested Monday night on a series of charges, have been released from jail.

Louis Jannanzo, of Buckeye avenue, charged with possessing intoxicating liquor; Louis Sarfina, of Michigan, charged with carrying concealed weapons and Sam Lascola, of Scottsdale, Pa., held also for carrying concealed weapons, were assessed fines of $500 and costs. Sam Pann, of Michigan, arrested on disorderly conduct charges, was fined $250 and costs. Police captured the men after an automobile chase in the west end of the city which wound up near Jannanzo's home in Buckeye avenue. Authorities confiscated two .32 caliber Colt automatics, a long knife, a half-gallon of whiskey and a gallon of wine.

RAIL VETERAN DIES IN DOVER

Word has been received here of the death of James Hays, 76 years old, retired railroad veteran, who died Friday morning at 3 o'clock at his home in Dover, following an extended illness.

He was a former resident of Wellsville, having been employed by the Pennsylvania railroad prior to his departure six years ago to Dover, in the capacity of a Cleveland & Pittsburgh division supervisor. He has been on the pension list for a year.

He is survived by his wife and three children, William, Francis and Catherine.

The body will be brought to Wellsville on Saturday morning and will be taken directly to St. Elizabeth cemetery for burial.

TUESDAY PROGRAM HERE IS SUCCESS

The Armistice day committee of Corporal D. D. Duty post, No. 139, Veterans of Foreign Wars, as well as auxiliary members, Thursday commended ex-service men, children, business men and other citizens for their assistance in making the Tuesday observance one of the most successful here in years.

Members of the Vets' committee included J. H. Storck, John Dash, E. J. Stoddard. The program was carried out completely, from the opening event, an address by F. L. Wells, the street parade, through to the afternoon football game and finally concluding with the fireworks display in the evening. The fireworks program was handled by Dominick Prezutti, of Bellaire, and was generally credited with having been one of the best here in a long time.

STRAIGHT-FROM-SHOULDER BLOWS BY EVANGELIST W. E. BIEDERWOLF

If you want to be made whole Jesus can do the work for you.

Persons afflicted with doubt, bitter temptations and strong passions can be freed by the light of Christ.

Let the sinner walk out on the promises of God and the water of life will spring up in his soul.

If you want a faith that will satisfy you in life and death then hear the Christ of God saying to you rise and take Him at His word.

You've got to get loose from the old life and the farther you can get away from it the better it will be for you.

Get a new hitching post; get rid of the trifling, godless crowd you've been training with; change your track and your drive; say "goodbye" to the old life and the dirty deeds of the flesh.

If you leave God out of your life and run it yourself you will run it into the dirt all the time.

Lot learned what many East Liverpool church members should learn, that they can not serve the world and God at the same time.

You might as well expect to overthrow the pyramids with a crowbar as to attempt to bring people into the kingdom while church members and officers indulge in social activities first.

If hell ever breaks out on this earth, it is when a family feud breaks out.

When people think they can choose what they please to do they are following Lot rather than Abraham.

Many preachers are staying in places at half the salary they might get elsewhere because they feel it is their duty to stay where they are.

I like church stewards if they will "stew" and church trustees if they can be trusted.

Lot, fascinated more by the glare and appeal of the wicked life in them, left the plains to live in Sodom and Gomorrah.

I would prefer the life long companionship and fellowship of a giddy man like Abraham than own all the corner lots of Sodom and Gomorrah.

It is marvelous to know God like some people know Him.

Intimate acquaintance with God is not found on the floor of the stock exchange and on the gilded floors of ball rooms.

Nothing eats out of the soul of a woman her loveliness and womanliness like the vain indulgences in the soul whirl.

Lot did not mean to be rich, but he purposed to be rich.

Many people, accumulating money, are permitting their souls to be dwarfed by social activities.

Lot and his wife, enmeshed in the social whirl of the city, permitted their daughters to marry Sodomites who were opposed to Jehovah.

To have known God and loved Him and then lose confidence in Him is to fall to the depth of degradation.

Church folks like Lot must learn they can't serve God and the world at the same time.

SHAVINGS AND SAWDUST FOUND IN DR. BIEDERWOLF'S TABERNACLE

All the co-operating Sunday Schools will meet at their respective churches or a brief session on Sunday morning and will then go in a body to the tabernacle where special services incident to the Sunday School and campaign will be held. This service always is one of the outstanding events of Dr. Biederwolf's campaign everywhere.

The finding of a needle in a haystack was proved possible on Tuesday when Caretaker Breaks of the tabernacle found one in the sawdust of one of the wide aisles of the auditorium. He will doubtless keep it as a memento of the campaign. The raking of the shavings might disclose articles lost as much out of place there as the discovered needle.

Commander J. A. Armstrong of the G. A. R. here, who offered the invocation on Tuesday night when patriotic exercises were held at the tabernacle, surprised all by the vigor and carrying quality of his voice.

Bells, ringing at noon, are signals of a half-minute of prayer all over the city. This departure, begun last week, will be continued indefinitely.

A Labor night will be held at the tabernacle on Thursday evening. Then the various local organizations will, it is planned, come to the services where reservations will be made for them.

Two mass meetings are scheduled for Sunday afternoon. One for men at 2:30 o'clock in the tabernacle will be addressed by Dr. Biederwolf. His subject will be "Sold Out." The other for women at the First U. P. church will be in charge of Miss Wilma E. Davis, who will speak.

Invalid Pays Huge Income Tax; Directs Affairs From Chair

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. — Leonard Howarth, little known Santa Rosa rancher, who attracted widespread attention when recently published income tax figures revealed that he had paid a tax of $116,061.78 for 1923

—one of the highest individual returns on the Pacific Coast—was found to be an invalid who directs his financial activities from a wheel chair.

Howarth, who lives quietly at "The Maples," three miles from Santa Rosa, has extensive interests in California, Oregon and Washington. He is vice president of the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber company, a director of the Everett Pulp & Paper company mill at Everett, Wash.; president of the Wilkerson Coal & Coke company; owner of large blocks of stock in public utility corporations, and active in extensive land operations in California.

The millionaire Santa Rosa rancher is said to be 50 and unmarried.

RHEUMATISM A REMARKABLE HOME TREATMENT GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT.

In the year of 1893, I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know, for over three years... I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bed-ridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism, to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1924.

Join The Red Cross

The Red Cross, the world's greatest humanitarian agency, today appeals to every man, woman and child in the East Liverpool district to enroll in the movement to aid sufferers everywhere. In business houses, the tress and postoffices workers are on duty in the annual roll call. They ask you to join.

The work of the mother of mankind is so generally known it is unnecessary to refer to it. The Red Cross is the first to answer the call for relief when misfortune strikes. It responds immediately when fire, flood, earthquake or other disaster occurs. And physicians, nurses and other co-workers stay on the job until all suffering has been relieved.

The Red Cross did Trojan work in the recent tornado in northern Ohio, and it is still engaged in the task imposed upon it. Earthquake sufferers in Italy and Japan and flood and mine victims in the United States know how well the duty is performed.

Help carry on the task. Enroll in the organization during the campaign which continues until Thanksgiving Day. Memberships cost only one dollar.

Church and Community

"The church," we are told often nowadays, "has lost its power. The life has gone out of it. It is no longer a force in the community. Its day is past."

Consider, then the situation in the thriving little city of Cape Girardeau, Mo., which, according to a national directory, has 10,000 people and numerous flour mills, foundries, factories making cigars, handles, boxes, threshing machines and staves, coopers, stone crushers, brick and lumber yards, cement works, and the usual outfit of stores, banks and other business institutions.

The stranger arriving there is greeted by a big sign opposite the handsome union station reading: "Cape Girardeau—a city of churches, schools and substantial business institutions, where the home is paramount and where the church is the foundation of the community life."

That church item challenges attention. The inquiring visitor soon discovers that it is mere idle boast or sentimental touch. The citizens have united in a movement to make the church really dominant in the life of their city.

They have a fund for that purpose, raised by public subscription. They set forth the claims of their religious institutions in three illuminated signboards and in systematic newspaper advertising the year 'round. Once a year the daily papers give a dinner at which pastors and representative laymen discuss plans for concerted church work. Budgets, attendance and miscellaneous activities are all increasing steadily. And there is harmony and genuine co-operation in that city, not to mention law, order, morals, education and civic progress.

"And the denomination running all this?" some inquirer may ask. Well, the chairman of the church promotion organization is a Protestant, the secretary is a Catholic, and the largest contributor is a Jew.

More City Managers

The city manager plan won new victories on election day, the most notable being in Cincinnati, the second largest city in Ohio. Cleveland adopted the plan two years ago and it has been in effect this year, with results generally satisfactory to the citizens.

The new method of city government has been confined for the most part to comparatively small cities, but its adoption by larger communities is significant. It is recognition of the fact that size has nothing to do with the effectiveness of the plan, and that if it will give a small community better government for the same cost, or as good government at less cost, its benefit to the larger community is likely to be correspondingly greater.

Altogether a couple of hundred American cities are now converted to this modern form of city administration. It is modified in various ways, to suit local taste, but the main purpose of it is always the same—to take city government as nearly as possible out of politics and run the municipality as a business institution, like other corporations.

Since some of our hair dyes contain silver salts, they may now sing—silvered threads among the old.

MONEY TALKING GAILY

Money is talking on the stock ticker cheerfully, telling the whole world that money is pleased with the election and the present condition of things in general.

Pity the poor broker, his sorrow is caused by too much prosperity. Since the election of President Coolidge he has sold on the New York stock exchange 10,000,000 shares of stock. Yesterday's sales were 2,500,000 shares.

May wheat went to $1.60 yesterday. Many farmers, more interested in profits than in theories, will feel better satisfied than ever with the election. Even better news, since wheat farmers were doing pretty well already, is the sharp upturn in cotton prices. A fair price for cotton is essential to sound prosperity.

LOOK LIKE A BOOM

Everything seems to be going up, cotton, wheat, stocks, even the price of seats on the stock exchange. That hopped up $10,000 yesterday. And, steel orders are going up with the rest. It's a boom, or many are mistaken.

Foreign exchanges went up, practically all the European and South American currencies made new high records for the year. The solid English pound, up three and one-quarter cents to $4.53, is almost at par with the Yankee dollar.

And, "call money," that stock speculators use in their operations, cost only 2 1/2 per cent. Everything about the stock exchange was "almost too good to be true."

ARMISTICE DAY NO. 6

Armistice day once more, six years since the shouting, laughing and weeping of November 11, 1918.

To boys and girls in their teens that great war is only a vague reality. Soon it will be talked about as we talk of the Civil war, or the Revolution. Forgetting is the easiest thing men do, and that's a blessing.

The world's financial recovery is slow. Here in America, thanks to Secretary Mellon, we have been cutting down our debts. But, in Europe, they owe seven and one-half billions more than they did when the war ended.

Worse than all money loss is the harm done to millions of children by cold and under-feeding. No financial genius can make up for that.

However, the world recovered even from the "black death" infinitely more destructive than the worst of all wars. It will recover completely from that war. Americans on Armistice Day should make up their minds to keep out of the next and all future wars. The way to do that is to keep ready for anything.

GOOD JOKE, BAD POLITICS

The Democrats are "analyzing the causes of the defeat." It doesn't need much analyzing. The Democrats in their convention kicked out several million voters in a religious discussion, and then selected the lawyer of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. to lead the "embattled hosts of Democracy."

That was a good joke, but not good politics.

Some learned Democrats say that nominating W. J. Bryan's brother for vice president was a handicap. They are like the man with the awful headache who had swallowed two lobsters, two quarts of champagne and a small glass of buttermilk. He blamed the buttermilk.

The sons of Charles H. Sabin and C. S. Mellon, wise bankers, start work as clerks in a department store at Albany. There is no better business education than department store training. It teaches merchandise, finance and, above all, human nature.

If you have an intelligent boy or girl, interested in business, the department store is the best place for a start.

Little countries make up in courage what they lack in size, money and population. There is Australia, right under the shadow of Japan, forbidding them to land on Australian soil.

And, now, Mexico, in her quarrel with the British not only recalls consuls and diplomats from Great Britain but closes up consulates in Canada and Australia.

The First Ward Democratic club of Jersey City has endorsed Governor Al Smith, of New York, for president in 1928. That's the first gun in a battle that will be in full swing three years from next April.

A Frenchman after 36 years of hard work presents to the scientific world a "perpetual" clock, 12 feet high, six feet wide and 3 1/2 feet deep, it weighs more than half a ton, has 12,000 separate pieces. It will run practically forever without being wound up. That is interesting, but not important. It isn't much trouble to wind a clock.

WHO'S WHO

CARL GUNDERSON.

Sixty years ago a hardy little youngster began the battle of life on a ranch in Clay county, in what was then Dakota territory. Clay county is now part of the state of South Dakota.

The lad was Carl Gunderson.

The blizzards of winter, the long droughts of summer and depredations against his cattle by Indians and rustlers gave the elder Gunderson little time to think of politics. Young Gunderson's first goal in life was to become big enough to ride the range with his dad. But later he had a "hankering" for politics.

The other day Carl Gunderson became governor-elect of South Dakota, one of the men carried into office in the general Republican landslide.

Carl did "rid the range" as soon as he was old enough to straddle a bronco. Then he was shipped off to school. He studied at the University of South Dakota, receiving his A. B. degree there in 1899.

The following year he journeyed east and studied civil engineering at Cornell. Returning to his home state he ran for and was elected to the state senate and served five terms with that body. For six years, from 1904 to 1910, he served as United States Indian allotting agent and then became supervisor of agents for a year.

Three years ago he was elected lieutenant governor of his state.

Of late years his home has been in Mitchell. He married Gertrude Bertelsen, a sweetheart of his school days, in 1892.

By ETHEL MARSHALL.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Although London theaters are full of American plays and American actors, London hasn't a chance of accurately estimating the true value of the American theater for the simple reason that the best of the American stars do not come to London.

There are two all-American casts playing in London's West End theaters now; but, if one may judge, they are probably first-class road companies and not full Broadway casts. Nevertheless, they are meeting with great success.

"The Nervous Wreck," an American farce, almost a disaster on its opening night, because it was considered too noisy by English playgoers. The gallery and the pit let the actors know they were making too much noise, and so the performance was toned down, and now it is rated as a first-class success.

Tom Douglas, an American youth, who had a failure here in "Merton of the Movies," is scoring a success in that rather erotic Hungarian play, "Fata Morgana," which came to London by way of New York. Douglas has a following here, which is something he has yet to acquire on Broadway, where the bright lights have never yet seen his name.

George Kelly brought his "Show Off" over the Atlantic and scored an immediate success. Raymond Walburn, in the leading role, tickles the English to death. Ellis Baker was announced as the leading lady, but the first-nighters and the critics awarded that honor to Clara Blandick, who romped away with the favor of the audience before she had been on the stage 10 minutes, and this despite the fact that she played a character part.

Josephine Victor, heralded as a great American star, is playing a leading role in "The Peacock," an English play, at the Ambassador. The critics have been kind to her.

Albert de Courville, who is rated as one of the best of English revue producers, registered what appeared to be a failure when he opened his "Looking Glass Revue." The critics found the only good feature in the revue to be two American dancers—Stanley and Byrnes. These boys may never have turned down fat contracts from Ziegfeld, but they certainly worked hard for De Courville and won the admiration of the English audience that found fault with everything else in the show. De Courville took the tip and drafted Harry Welch from American burlesque, and now the show is rated a success.

"The Room Next Door," which Sewell Collins obtained from America for "Outward Bound," continues to hang out the "House Full" signs every night.

Meanwhile Drury Lane, that shrine of English drama, continues to "stand them up" nightly for a film—"The Thief of Bagdad"—another American production, taking good English shillings.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The New York hotel of a generation ago with its vast corridors, spacious drawing rooms, Peacock Alleys and towering ceilings is no more. Proprietors have found space occupied for social purposes a growing charge since prohibition.

Salons and writing rooms are now a luxury no hotel can afford. The new hotels are as compact as sardines in a can. The Madison avenue facade of the Biltmore is being converted into a block of small shops. The new Roosevelt has its entrance on the side and the Madison avenue block is given over to small shops.

The Ritz has several little stores and plans to have more. Thus Madison avenue from Forty-third to Forty-ninth streets becomes Manhattan's Rue de Rivoli—a cluster of small and exclusive shops. Proprietors seek only the clientele regarded as smart. Prices are higher than on Fifth avenue.

In all the hotels that have been completed for full opening the most noticeable feature is the lack of the great "open spaces." The lobby crowds are missing. There is no place to loaf. In one hotel there is only place for three people to be seated in the lobby.

Hotel patrons are expected to register and go to their rooms. The dining rooms are small and each hotel is making an effort to have guests dine in their rooms. A full kitchen equipment for each floor is now a part of all new hotels.

Many believe also that there will be no more mammoth hotels in New York. The future hotel will not have more than 300 rooms. The big hotel faces a great problem in good service and, even if it achieves it, the personal contact between management and guest is missing.

One of the greatest hotel losses now is in ruined carpets. This is the result of patrons mixing drinks in their rooms and splattering the contents on the floor. Cigarette stubs left by imbibers on furniture has also entailed a heavy loss.

One of the dapper dressers in the downtown district is "Rocco" Caruso, the bootblack. Caruso owns the shoe shining parlor in the Woolworth building. It has 14 chairs and when trade is brisk Caruso does not hesitate to plunge in and help in spite of his dandyism. He came to America an immigrant and began as a bus boy at the Waldorf—the bus puts glasses of water on tables and carries off dishes. Caruso is worth $75,000 aside from his business establishment.

The other night at a late hour I saw a man and woman at one of the train gates of the Grand Central. She was pleading with him and was weeping. Not once did his adamant expression relax. It was easy to see her treatises were vain. The last "All Aboard" call came and she shot through the gates just as they clanged shut. She stood swaying a little and then walked rapidly away. Scarcely a heart throb and impelled by idle curiosity I followed. Three blocks away at a subway entrance she met a man pacing nervously up and down puffing a cigar. As she approached him, she said: "Well, I'm rid of that fathead." A great actress, anyway.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

A GROCERY ON WHEELS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Delivering purchases is one of the big items of cost in all merchandising. It is especially important in the food business where competition is keen and the margins of profit are necessarily small. Hence, it is a problem that has been tackled from many different angles.

One solution was to abolish all deliveries. Chain stores were established that promised lower prices if customers would carry home all their purchases. Nothing would be delivered, but the inconvenience and labor involved in lugging about the well-filled market basket would be compensated for by the reduction in the food item in the family budget. The idea was favorably received, and such stores are said to have prospered, other things being equal.

However, the latest scheme is to take the grocery to the customer, which not only solves the delivery problem but also does away with the necessity of going to the grocery or of telephoning in one's orders. Every day at a certain hour a huge truck drags up at the front or side door and a gong announces the arrival of the motoria, a serve-yourself store on wheels with a complete stock of groceries, bread, cakes, fruits, green and staple vegetables, meats and drug sundries.

It is not a new idea, altogether, for rural districts have long known the huckster, the itinerant purveyor of everything from fresh meats to needles and pins, who took butter and eggs in trade or did business on a cash basis, while fish peddlers, fruit vendors and fresh vegetable dealers have long been familiar sights on city streets. It is merely a matter of carrying an old idea to its logical development.

Experimenters say that the scheme is a winner. Truck manufacturers who furnish the automobile part of the store on wheels are particularly enthusiastic over it. Dealers say that it means more profits and quicker turn-overs, and customers bear testimony to its advantages both in convenience and in economy of time and money. It is too early as yet, perhaps, to say that motoria has come to stay, but all signs point to that.

A VERITABLE CARRYALL

Those who have seen all the furnishings of a fair-sized apartment loaded into a huge moving van will understand the possibilities of the motoria. It is a veritable carryall, capable of supplying the needs of 400 families a day. It is a store 22 feet in length by 7 1/2 feet in width, with the commodities so conveniently arranged and so adroitly packed that 10 or 12 customers can be accommodated at one time.

It is a one-man shop, the one man being chauffeur, clerk and cashier. However, he has little clerking to do, as the customers wait on themselves, every article being marked with its price as in the well known "Piggly-Wiggly" carry-your-own chain stores. The housewife finds it a well-stocked, low-priced store, brought to her very door, well lighted and heated, neat, clean and sanitary, where she can supply any ordinary need. She has the advantage of being able to shop for her purchases—look and pick—and get out of her house for but a few minutes.

Many a housewife has found that she would patronize the fresh vegetable man were it not that each day she requires staples which must come from the grocery, and meat, hence it is more convenient to make one job of all her marketing, whether she does it in person and supplies her own delivery system, or orders by telephone and pays the store for delivery. Many a one has found, too, that after she has phoned her order and the boy has delivered it, she has forgotten an item or two that would not have been overlooked had she gone to the grocery or had the grocery been brought to her door so that she might look over the various commodities and refresh her memory as to her requirements.

The motoria attendant also takes orders for delivery next day or later in the week, if anytime special is needed, which is another convenience, and acquaints customers in advance of bargain offerings, learning their possible requirements or booking their orders.

SAVINGS THAT ARE EFFECTED

The economies of operation of the store on wheels include reduction in clerk hire and savings in rent, light, heat, window displays, delivery and other items. The greatest benefit to the dealer, however, lies in his increased trade area and multiplied turn-over. The average chain store or corner grocery draws its trade from a radius of four or five blocks, while the motoria calls on the families in 35 to 40 blocks every day.

There are more than 450,000 grocers and butchers for the 24,000,000 families in the United States, which means an average of 54 customers for every tradesman. The motoria can serve 400 families daily, as has been said.

But the turn-over proposition is even more important. The turn-over of the ordinary chain store is 13 times in a year, while that of the 5-and-10-cent store is slightly less than twice that, or 24 times a year. That of the motoria is 100 times a year, or seven and one-half times that of the chain store. Of course, the stock of the store on wheels is smaller and the required capital is less, but the proprietor is getting so much more "action on his money" that his profits are correspondingly greater.

The grocery business is one of the most hazardous among the retail trades. Only five out of every hundred grocers are said to make a success of their business. Fifteen per cent worry along on a hand-to-mouth existence basis, while 80 per cent are able to stave off failure only seven years or less.

The average gross business of city chain stores is reported as being slightly under $500 per week and their average net profit is from 2 to 3 per cent. They must have a turn-over of eight and a half times a year to avoid bankruptcy.

It is claimed that the motoria can hold its prices down to chain store levels and with its greatly increased turn-over resulting from the increased number of customers net a profit of 12 per cent. If that be true, trade experts say the store on wheels has come to stay. Obviously it will not succeed in all communities. One residence section of Washington that had a motoria a few months ago sees it no longer. However, if the territory is well chosen, and if other elements of operation are well taken care of, it is said that the grocery that visits its customers daily is assured of success.

Other features of household service are opened up by it. Taking cold orders with a next day delivery is one. A laundry pick-up with a one or two-day service is another. A banking system on the stamp and card basis is still another. And with it all is the big idea of making living easier and cheaper, to which the popular response is certain.

DINNER STORIES

Blinks was a supreme optimist; nothing ever worried him. One day, during a flood, he was seen by a neighbor lucky enough to possess a boat, sitting peacefully on the roof of his house as the water rose.

"Hallo, Blinks," cried the neighbor.

"Hallo, Sam," responded Blinks, cheerfully.

"All your poultry washed away, I suppose?" inquired the sympathizer.

"Yes," said Blinks, "but the ducks can swim."

"Apple trees gone too, eh?"

"Yes, but the crop would have failed, anyway."

"So will you," retorted the other, "if you sit there much longer. Why, the water's covered your ground floor windows already."

"I know," assented Blinks, "and a good thing it is, too. Them windows did need washing."

"No, sah," said the negro, "dat ar new doctor ain't no use!"

"How is that, Sambo?" asked the missionary.

"Well, sah," replied Sambo, "it am like dis. Dat doctor he tole me to eat chicken for my dinner, and be sure to go to bed at 10 o'clock. But, sah, if I go to bed at 10 o'clock how am I to get chicken for mah dinner?"

EAST LIVERPOOL—AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1924.

Join The Red Cross

The Red Cross, the world's greatest humanitarian agency, today appeals to every man, woman and child in the East Liverpool district to enroll in the movement to aid sufferers everywhere. In business houses, the-trees and postoffices workers are on duty in the annual roll call. They ask you to join.

The work of the mother of mankind is so generally known it is unnecessary to refer to it. The Red Cross is the first to answer the call for relief when misfortune strikes. It responds immediately when fire, flood, earthquake or other disaster occurs. And physicians, nurses and other co-workers stay on the job until all suffering has been relieved.

The Red Cross did Trojan work in the recent tornado in northern Ohio, and it is still engaged in the task imposed upon it. Earthquake sufferers in Italy and Japan and flood and mine victims in the United States know how well the duty is performed.

Help carry on the task. Enroll in the organization during the campaign which continues until Thanksgiving Day. Memberships cost only one dollar.

Church and Community

"The church," we are told often nowadays, "has lost its power. The life has gone out of it. It is no longer a force in the community. Its day is past."

Consider, then the situation in the thriving little city of Cape Girardeau, Mo., which, according to a national directory, has 10,000 people and numerous flour mills, foundries, factories making cigars, handles, boxes, threshing machines and staves, coopers, stone crushers, brick and lumber yards, cement works, and the usual outfit of stores, banks and other business institutions.

The stranger arriving there is greeted by a big sign opposite the handsome union station reading: "Cape Girardeau—a city of churches, schools and substantial business institutions, where the home is paramount and where the church is the foundation of the community life."

That church item challenges attention. The inquiring visitor soon discovers that it is mere idle boast or sentimental touch. The citizens have united in a movement to make the church really dominant in the life of their city.

They have a fund for that purpose, raised by public subscription. They set forth the claims of their religious institutions in three illuminated signboards and in systematic newspaper advertising the year 'round. Once a year the daily papers give a dinner at which pastors and representative laymen discuss plans for concerted church work. Budgets, attendance and miscellaneous activities are all increasing steadily. And there is harmony and genuine co-operation in that city, not to mention law, order, morals, education and civic progress.

"And the denomination running all this?" some inquirer may ask. Well, the chairman of the church promotion organization is a Protestant, the secretary is a Catholic, and the largest contributor is a Jew.

More City Managers

The city manager plan won new victories on election day, the most notable being in Cincinnati, the second largest city in Ohio. Cleveland adopted the plan two years ago and it has been in effect this year, with results generally satisfactory to the citizens.

The new method of city government has been confined for the most part to comparatively small cities, but its adoption by larger communities is significant. It is recognition of the fact that size has nothing to do with the effectiveness of the plan, and that if it will give a small community better government for the same cost, or as good government at less cost, its benefit to the larger community is likely to be correspondingly greater.

Altogether a couple of hundred American cities are now converted to this modern form of city administration. It is modified in various ways, to suit local taste, but the main purpose of it is always the same—to take city government as nearly as possible out of politics and run the municipality as a business institution, like other corporations.

Since some of our hair dyes contain silver salts, may now sing—silvered threads among the old.

George Kelly brought his "Show Off" over the Atlantic and scored an immediate success. Raymond Walburn, in the leading role, tickles the English to death. Ellis Baker was announced as the leading lady, but the first-nighters and the critics awarded that honor to Clara Blandick, who romped away with the favor of the audience before she had been on the stage 10 minutes, and this despite the fact that she played a character part.

Josephine Victor, heralded as a great American star, is playing a leading role in "The Pelican," an English play, at the Ambassador. The critics have been kind to her.

Albert de Courville, who is rated as one of the best of English revue producers, registered what appeared to be a failure when he opened his "Looking Glass Revue." The critics found the only good feature in the revue to be two American dancers—Stanley and Byrnes. These boys may never have turned down flat contracts from Ziegfeld, but they certainly worked hard for De Courville and won the admiration of the English audience that found fault with everything else in the show. De Courville took the tip and drafted Harry Welch from American burlesque, and now the show is rated a success.

"The Room Next Door," which Sewell Collins obtained from America for "Outward Bound," continues to hang out the "House Full" signs every night.

Meanwhile Drury Lane, that shrine of English drama, continues to "stand them up" nightly for a film—"The Thief of Bagdad"—another American production, taking good English shillings.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The New York hotel of a generation ago with its vast corridors, spacious drawing rooms, Peacock Alleys and towering ceilings is no more. Proprietors have found space occupied for social purposes a growing charge since prohibition.

Salons and writing rooms are now a luxury no hotel can afford. The new hotels are as compact as sardines in a can. The Madison avenue facade of the Biltmore is being converted into a block of small shops. The new Roosevelt has its entrance on the side and the Madison avenue block is given over to small shops.

The Ritz has several little stores and plans to have more. Thus Madison avenue from Forty-third to Forty-ninth streets becomes Manhattan's Rue de Rivoli—a cluster of small and exclusive shops. Proprietors seek only the clientele regarded as smart. Prices are higher than on Fifth avenue.

In all the hotels that have been completed for fall opening the most noticeable feature is the lack of the great "open spaces." The lobby crowds are missing. There is no place to loaf. In one hotel there is only place for three people to be seated in the lobby.

Hotel patrons are expected to register and go to their rooms. The dining rooms are small and each hotel is making an effort to have guests dine in their rooms. A full kitchen equipment for each floor is now a part of all new hotels.

Many believe also that there will be no more mammoth hotels in New York. The future hotel will not have more than 300 rooms. The big hotel faces a great problem in good service and, even if it achieves it, the personal contact between management and guest is missing.

One of the greatest hotel losses now is in ruined carpets. This is the result of patrons mixing drinks in their rooms and splattering the contents on the floor. Cigarette stubs left by imbibers on furniture has also entailed a heavy loss.

One of the dapper dressers in the downtown district is "Rocco" Caruso, the bootblack. Caruso owns the shoe shining parlor in the Woolworth building. It has 14 chairs and when trade is brisk Caruso does not hesitate to plunge in and help in spite of his dandyism. He came to America an immigrant and began as a bus boy at the Waldorf—the bus puts glasses of water on tables and carries off dishes. Caruso is worth $75,000 aside from his business establishment.

The other night at a late hour I saw a man and woman at one of the train gates of the Grand Central. She was pleading with him and was weeping. Not once did his adamant expression relax. It was easy to see her treatise were vain. The last "All Aboard" call came and he shot through the gates just as they clanged shut. She stood swaying a little and then walked rapidly away. Scouting a heart throb and impelled by idle curiosity I followed. Three blocks away at a subway entrance she met a man pacing nervously up and down puffing a cigar. As she approached him, she said: "Well, I'm rid of that fathead." A great actress, anyway.

In a bakery window on Columbus avenue there is a miniature building in pastry. It is five feet high and four feet square. There are windows, roof gardens and even flags unfastened. The man who did it is a retired millionaire baker and fashioned it merely for pastime.

For three nights a steam driller pegged through the rocks of a street in the East Seventies. A harassed business man worn out from lack of sleep decided to take matters in his own hand and threw foul smelling medicated bombs among the workmen. They finally quit.

A GROCERY ON WHEELS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Delivering purchases is one of the big items of cost in all merchandising. It is especially important in the food business where competition is keen and the margins of profit are necessarily small. Hence, it is a problem that has been tackled from many different angles.

One solution was to abolish all deliveries. Chain stores were established that promised lower prices if customers would carry home all their purchases. Nothing would be delivered, but the inconvenience and labor involved in lugging about the well-filled market basket would be compensated for by the reduction in the food item in the family budget. The idea was favorably received, and such stores are said to have prospered, other things being equal.

However, the latest scheme is to take the grocery to the customer, which not only solves the delivery problem but also does away with the necessity of going to the grocery or of telephoning in one's orders. Every day at a certain hour a huge truck drags up at the front or side door and goes and announces the arrival of the motoria, a service, self store on wheels with a complete stock of groceries, bread, cakes, fruits, green and staple vegetables, meats and drug sundries.

It is not a new idea, altogether, for rural districts have long known the huckster, the itinerant purveyor of everything from fresh meats to needles and pins, who took bread and eggs in trade or did business on a cash basis while fish peddlers, fruit vendors and fresh produce dealers have long been familiar sights on city streets. It is merely a matter of carrying an old idea to its logical development.

Experimenters say that the scheme is a winner. Truck manufacturers who furnish the automobile part of the store in wheels are particularly enthusiastic over it. Dealers say that it means more profits and quicker turn-overs, and customers bear testimony to its advantages both in convenience and in economy of time and money. It is too early as yet, perhaps, to say that motoria has come to stay, but all signs point to that.

Those who have seen all the furnishings of a fair-sized apartment loaded into a huge moving van will understand the possibilities of the motoria. It is a veritable carryall, capable of supplying the needs of 400 families a day. It is a store 22 feet in length by 7 1/2 feet in width, with the commodities so conveniently arranged and so adroitly packed that 10 or 12 customers can be accommodated at one time.

It is a one-man shop, the one man being chauffeur, clerk and cashier. However, he has little clerking to do, as the customers wait on themselves, every article being marked with its price as in the well known "Piggly-Wiggly" carry-your-own chain stores. The housewife finds it a well-stocked, low-priced store, brought to her very door, well lighted and heated, neat, clean and sanitary, where she can supply any ordinary need. She has the advantage of being able to shop for her purchases—look and pick—and is out of her house for but a few minutes.

Many a housewife has found that she would patronize the fresh vegetable man were it not that each day she requires staples which must come from the grocery, and meat, hence it is more convenient to make one job of all her marketing, whether she does it in person and supplies her own delivery system, or orders by telephone and pays the store for delivery. Many a one has found, too, that after she has phoned her order and the boy has delivered it, she has forgotten an item or two that would not have been overlooked had she gone to the grocery or had the grocery been brought to her door so that she might look over the various commodities and refresh her memory as to her requirements.

The motoria attendant also takes orders for delivery next day or later in the week, if anything special is needed, which is another convenience, and acquaints customers in advance of bargain offerings, learning their possible requirements or booking their orders.

SAVINGS THAT ARE EFFECTED

The economies of operation of the store on wheels include reduction in clerk hire and savings in rent, light, heat, window displays, delivery and other items. The greatest benefit to the dealer, however, lies in his increased trade area and multiplied turn-over. The average chain store or corner grocery draws its trade from a radius of four or five blocks, while the motoria calls on the families in 35 to 40 blocks every day.

There are more than 450,000 grocers and butchers for the 24,000,000 families in the United States, which means an average of 54 customers for every tradesman. The motoria can serve 400 families daily, as has been said.

But the turn-over proposition is even more important. The turn-over of the ordinary chain store is 13 times in a year, while that of the 5-and-10-cent store is slightly less than twice that, or 24 times a year. That of the motoria is 100 times a year, or seven and one-half times that of the chain store. Of course, the stock of the store on wheels is smaller and the required capital is less, but the proprietor is getting so much more "action on his money" that his profits are correspondingly greater.

The grocery business is one of the most hazardous among the retail trades. Only five out of every hundred grocers are said to make a success of their business. Fifteen per cent worry along on a hand-to-mouth existence basis, while 80 per cent are able to stave off failure only seven years or less.

The average gross business of city chain stores is reported as being slightly under $500 per week and their average net profit is from 2 to 3 per cent. They must have a turn-over of eight and a half times a year to avoid bankruptcy.

It is claimed that the motoria can hold its prices down to chain store levels and with its greatly increased turn-over resulting from the increased number of customers net a profit of 12 per cent. If that be true, trade experts say the store on wheels has come to stay. Obviously it will not succeed in all communities. One residence section of Washington that had a motoria a few months ago sees it no longer. However, if the territory is well chosen, and if other elements of operation are well taken care of, it is said that the grocery that visits its customers daily is assured of success.

Other features of the household service are opened up by it. Taking coal orders with a next day delivery is one. A laundry pickup with a one or two-day service is another. A banking system on the stamp and card basis is still another. And with it all is the big idea of making living easier and cheaper, to which the popular response is certain.

DINNER STORIES

Blinks was a supreme optimist; nothing ever worried him. One day, during a flood, he was seen by a neighbor lucky enough to possess a boat, sitting peacefully on the roof of his house as the water rose.

"Hullo, Blinks," cried the neighbor.

"Hullo, Sam," responded Blinks, cheerfully.

"All your poultry washed away, I suppose?" inquired the sympathizer.

"Yes," said Blinks, "but the ducks can swim."

"Apple trees gone too, eh?"

"Yes, but the crop would have failed, anyway."

"So will you," retorted the other, "if you sit there much longer. Why, the water's covered your ground floor windows already."

"I know," assented Blinks, "and a good thing it is, too. Them windows did need washing."

"No, sah," said the negro, "dat ar new doctor ain't no use!"

"How is that, Sambo?" asked the missionary.

"Well, sah," replied Sambo, "it an like dis. Dat doctor he tole me to eat chicken for my dinner, and be sure to go to bed at 10 o'clock. But, sah, if I go to bed at 10 o'clock how am I to get chicken for mah dinner?"

Mae Busch Essays Stellar Role as Wife In Picture, "Bread"

An unusual scene of great dramatic power is developed early in the course of action of "Bread" the Metro-Moldwin picture which came to the American theatre Wednesday. This scene involves a woman's discovery of the theft of the household money by her husband, and the strident difficulties of this striking situation are met with an astonishing ease and power by Mae Busch in the role of the outraged wife.

Jeanette is forced to give up her position by the ill-founded jealousy of her employer's wife. This catastrophe leads her to marry a spendthrift salesman by the name of Marti Devlin, and the marriage turns out badly. It is at this point that the discovery of the theft occurs. Jeanette leaves him and goes back into the business of earning her bread.

How she becomes an important member of the firm, how she is finally reunited with her regenerated husband—these incidents form the remaining substance of a matchless film. Victor Schertzinger, who directed the photoplay, has enhanced every possible screen value of the widely discussed Charles D. Norris novel of the same name.

Mae Busch Essays Stellar Role as Wife In Picture, "Bread"

An unusual scene of great dramatic power is developed early in the course of action of "Bread" the Metro-Moldwin picture which came to the American theatre Wednesday. This scene involves a woman's discovery of the theft of the household money by her husband, and the stitronic difficulties of this striking situation are met with an astonishing ease and power by Mae Busch in the role of the outraged wife.

Jeanette is forced to give up her position by the ill-founded jealousy of her employer's wife. This catastrophe leads her to marry a spendthrift salesman by the name of Marti Devlin, and the marriage turns out badly. It is at this point that the discovery of the theft occurs. Jeanette leaves him and goes back into the business of earning her bread.

How she becomes an important member of the firm, how she is finally reunited with her regenerated husband—these incidents form the remaining substance of a matchless film. Victor Schertzinger, who directed the photoplay, has enhanced every possible scene value of the widely discussed Charis D. Norris novel of the same name.

AKRON VOTES 7-CENT FARE

New Franchise Gets Citizens' O. K. at Polls.

AKRON, Nov. 13.—Citizens have just approved a new agreement with The Northern Traction and Light company granting an increased car fare in Akron. The company agrees to increase city service with both cars and buses as traffic warrants. Unofficial returns show that the franchise won by approximately 4,000.

There was little active opposition to the franchise. It was drawn at conferences between the Akron City council and company representatives and submitted to a direct vote of the car riders at the regular election by initiative petitions. City officials, who, by their refusal to grant the company an increased fare last February, caused Akron to be without car church and the Christian Endeavor society of the First Christian church are making plans for these affairs at an early date.

Mission Circle to Meet.
Members of Missionary Circle of the First Christian church will meet Friday evening with Miss Ina Thomas at her home near the Mill addition. Routine business will be transacted.

Class Members To Meet.
Members of the Bible Searchers' class of the First Methodist Episcopal church will meet this evening in the tabernacle. Mrs. J. A. Billman, president of the class, will be in charge of the meeting. Following the business session a social hour will be held.

Hunting Season Opens.
Residents of the Keystone state are now permitted to engage in hunting as the ban in effect since Nov. 1 has been lifted by Gov. Pinchot. The restriction was placed owing to the danger of forest fires on the original opening date.

Road Work Progressing.
Good progress is being made on the road improvement work in Green township, near Laughlin's Corner. Large force of men are engaged and every effort will be made to rush it to a speedy completion.

service for four weeks, tacitly approved the agreement by keeping silent about it.

This was in marked contrast to the situation last February when car service was stopped. Then the mayor and members of the city council declared they stood on a "five-cent fare or nothing." When the company stopped service buses were imported from all parts of the country and an attempt made to "motorize" Akron under a five cent fare. Four weeks of bus service was enough. The council made a temporary compromise agreement with the company granting an increased fare, elimination of competitive buses and providing for examination of the company's books to determine the cost of a ride. The official report of the accountants, paid for by the city, showed the cost of each ride, without an allowance for return investment, was more than five and a half cents. In the face of this fact and the failure of the attempted motorization of the city, a new agreement under an increased fare was inevitable.

The new franchise provides for a single cash fare of seven cents, four tickets for 25 cents and 17 for $1.

The Akron company has gone as far probably as any local company in co-ordination of bus and electric railway service. It operates 140 street cars and 65 buses. Cars carried 73,500 passengers daily last year and buses 24,000. The same fare is charged on both conveyances and there is an interchangeable transfer.

are Charles Ferrocet, an artist, now of Neuchatel, Switzerland, but formerly of New York, and Louis Kraus, a writer, whose home is in New York. The two men embarked in their thirty-foot craft on an 1,800-mile voyage with scarcely more provisions than they expected to use on the trip. Only sails propel the small vessel, and, because of the inclement weather generally prevailing at this time of year, the voyage has attracted the attention of many experienced mariners.

Stricken down in the epidemic of infantile paralysis in 1921, he lost the use of his legs. And all the while he is planning a political as well as a physical comeback.

AKRON VOTES 7-CENT FARE

New Franchise Gets Citizens' O. K. at Polls.

AKRON, Nov. 13.—Citizens have just approved a new agreement with The Northern Traction and Light company granting an increased car fare in Akron. The company agrees to increase city service with both cars and buses as traffic warrants. Unofficial returns show that the franchise won by approximately 4,000.

There was little active opposition to the franchise. It was drawn at conferences between the Akron City council and company representatives and submitted to a direct vote of the car riders at the regular election by initiative petitions. City officials, who, by their refusal to grant the company an increased fare last February, caused Akron to be without car service for four weeks, tacitly approved the agreement by keeping silent about it.

This was in marked contrast to the situation last February when car service was stopped. Then the mayor and members of the city council declared they stood on a "five-cent fare or nothing." When the company stopped service buses were imported from all parts of the country and an attempt made to "motorize" Akron under a five cent fare. Four weeks of bus service was enough. The council made a temporary compromise agreement with the company granting an increased fare, elimination of competitive buses and providing for examination of the company's books to determine the cost of a ride. The official report of the accountants, paid for by the city, showed the cost of each ride, without an allowance for return investment, was more than five and a half cents. In the face of this fact and the failure of the attempted motorization of the city, a new agreement under an increased fare was inevitable.

The new franchise provides for a single cash fare of seven cents, four tickets for 25 cents and 17 for $1. The Akron company has gone as far probably as any local company in co-ordination of bus and electric railway service. It operates 140 street cars and 65 buses. Cars carried 73,500 passengers daily last year and buses 24,000. The same fare is charged on both conveyances and there is an interchangeable transfer.

Stiff Joints Relieved With Old Holland Remedy

There's no excuse now for continued suffering from the tortures of joint pains in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, finger or spine. A famous old remedy discovered over 250 years ago by a Holland chemist, gives gratifying, soothing relief, in a remarkably short time by removing the cause. These pains are due to some kind of internal infection (often located in other parts of the body) which throw off "pain-causing" poisons. This amazing old oil, imported from Holland, breaks up and banishes the "pain-causing" poisons, by getting at the cause and thus restores the body to its normal state. This old reliable Holland remedy is known in this country as Red Mill Hair Oil. Sold in capsule form—pleasant to take—inexpensive. It can be obtained in this city, with money-back guarantee from good druggists, such as C. G. Anderson, J. C. Carnahan, Gamble's Drug Store.

The two men embarked in their thirty-foot craft on an 1,800-mile voyage with scarcely more provisions than they expected to use on the trip. Only sails propel the small vessel, and, because of the inclement weather generally prevailing at this time of year, the voyage has attracted the attention of many experienced mariners.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

A REAL PRINCE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have gone out with loads of nice young men but have never fallen in love, although I have held the hearts of many. I think I am at last slipping. Yet I will not admit it even to him. When I met him a year ago I liked him as I have liked many boys, but I gradually fell dead in love with this big boy. He is so kind and trustworthy that I could not help but love him. His friends think the world of him, but he has told only me of his past. He said that since he met me, he has led a different life altogether. I very seldom let him kiss me and he respects me for it, but many a time I long to be in his arms where I know I will be safe from all harm. My sister doesn't like him because of his job. He only gets about $20 or $23 a week. He always sends money home to his parents for they need it. He cannot learn a trade because he would have to start at the bottom with small wages and his mother would miss the money she is getting from her boy. My sister has been married twice and has enough experience, but she doesn't seem to understand. She wants me to give him up before I am in love, for she claims that he will never see his parents want as long as they live and his wife will only suffer for lack of funds. I have ambitions of my own that will enable me to marry for at least four years. Do you think it is all right to let him treat me as my lover (which I long to have him do) even though we will not be engaged and I will go out with others, or should I make him treat me only as a friend.

"BROWN EYES."

It would not be wise to let this boy make love to you unless you were engaged to marry. From your description of him, he seems a worthwhile chap, one any girl could be proud to love. The very fact that he does help his parents indicates that he is a good man. Your sister is very foolish to rate a man by the amount of wages he earns. If you love him don't fight against your love just because of her dislike of him. Perhaps with your interest in him spurring him on he may be able to climb in the business world and make something of himself. You are a lucky girl to have his love.

PROPER MANNERS.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: 1—What would be the polite and kind way of thanking a boy friend for bringing you home from school in his car, or for taking you for a ride when you meet him on the street. 2—What is the proper way of acknowledging an introduction? 3—When introducing your boy friend to a crowd of girls what is the most charming way? 4—Is it necessary to speak a person's name when you greet them? 5—Would it be too much to ask some girls who are liked real well by boys to write and tell me what they do, or talk about, that attracts the boys and makes them like them? I've read many times that if I'm a sympathetic listener, etc., I'll be popular but I think if some girl who is popular, not flatter popularity, will give me her experience I'll be more successful. 6—What is the nice way to refuse a kiss to a boy when you are not engaged to him? I'm 19. LORETO.

1—Thank you very much is all that is necessary. 2—A bow smile, and "How do you do?" 3—Helen. (or Miss Black) "do you know my friend, Jack Brown? Agnes, Grace, Clara—" and so on, introducing him to each in turn. 4—No, but it is a pleasant acknowledgment and shows you have understood the name. 5—That is a good idea, and I will be glad to print such letters. 6—"I make it a rule never to kiss boys. Please don't ask me."

BILLY: If the boy cares for you, he will go with you. As long as he does not seek your company you may be sure he is indifferent to you. Keep your liking for him to yourself, because if you talk about it to your friends he will find out and he will be disgusted with you. It may be that in the future he will go with you as far as I can see you have no reason to believe he will.

AFRAID SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Operation Advised, But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made It Unnecessary

Glasgow, Kentucky.—"I was run-down, nervous, with no appetite. My side had given me trouble for five or six years. At times it was all I could do to live, and the doctor said I couldn't live but a short time longer without an operation. That was two years ago. My sister-in-law recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She had never used it herself, but she said one of her neighbors suffered just like I did, and it cured her. After I had taken four bottles the pain left my side. I had a fine appetite to eat anything that was put before me, and I began to do all my work and my washing, something I hadn't done for years. I am a dressmaker, and this last fall I began suffering with my side again, so I began taking the Vegetable Compound again. I am on my fourth bottle, which makes eight in all I have taken. I feel so much better when I take it and everybody tells me I look better. My appetite improves and I feel stronger in every way. I am a very nervous woman and it seems to help my nerves so much."—Mrs. MAGGIE WALLER, Glasgow, Ky.

Newspaper Man in Responsible Post

ANSON F. HARDMAN

Anson F. Hardman, well-known Ohio newspaper man and recently associate editor of The Morning Republican of Findlay, O., is now assistant to Randolph Elde, general manager of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company and in general charge of publicity and advertising. Mr. Hardman was well known as the author of a widely syndicated semi-humorous comment column and other newspaper features. He is located at the general offices at Cleveland O.

with a girl of 19 for nearly a year. I am in love with her and I think she loves me. But she is always finding fault with things I do and accusing me of going out with other girls. I am a musician and at present am playing with a very popular orchestra and am drawing a good salary. Don't you think if she really loved me she would trust and encourage me? She wants me to give up playing and get work some place where I can learn a trade. I have spoken of marriage but she will give no satisfaction as long as I insist on being a musician. I have spent four years learning to play a banjo and don't like to give it up. I love her dearly and would do almost anything for her, but I don't like to start at the bottom again. I am making much more than I would at any apprentice job and it would take a long time to get to the top again. DANNY DREAMER.

A fault-finder will spoil any marriage, whether it is the husband or the wife who has the falling. I would advise you to stay at the work you seem to enjoy so much. Keep on with your study of music and musical instruments and there is no reason why you should not make quite a place for yourself in the world. It is a man's right to choose for his profession something which appeals to him. Do not be turned aside from your purpose since your desire to follow music is so strong.

Hard to Forget Him

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 17 years old and a senior in high school. I have been going with a fellow for quite a while. I go with other boys but I seem to care more for him than all the rest I go with. He told me earnestly how much he cared for me but I don't think he meant what he said. He has many chances to go with other girls but he very seldom takes them. Lately he has been acting rather queerly. I haven't been with him for over three weeks. Some one told me he went with another girl from out of town, but I have never seen him with any. I spoke to him one Sunday afternoon during that time but he did not act like himself. He thinks I should do just as he tells me. Should I? During the last few weeks I have been going with another boy. He treats me any place I want to go, but still I do not care for him as much as I do for the other one. What shall I do? GLORIA.

It is evident that the boy you care for does not care for you any longer, and therefore the only thing for you to do is to try to forget him. Have a good time with the other friends and forget about love for a while. Later on some one else will enter your life who will mean just as much to you and in the meantime content yourself with friendships. Of course you should not let any one influence you unless

Virginia Valli Stars in "Signal Tower" at Ceramic

A woman's intuition versus a man's logic!

When those two rivals meet on the open field of matrimony, it's a great game. Probably there isn't a married man alive who doesn't know the rules. As a matter of fact, a lot of them keep score cards in their file of experience. Wise philosophers, modern and ancient, have recorded that woman's intuition has a funny habit of winning out.

When Wadsworth Camp wrote his prize story, "The Signal Tower," the Universal-Super-Jewel to be shown at the Ceramic theatre Saturday, he had a railroad man's wife in mind more than a railroad man. Virginia Valli, is starred as the wife, Clarence L. Brown directed with Rockliffe Fellowes and Wallace Beery supporting.

A man frequently will like another man and think he's a "good fellow." But let the wife meet this good fellow. At once she'll say, "I like him"—or, "I don't like him." And she's usually right.

The railroad man hero of "The Signal Tower" brings a new tower operator home, a "good fellow," to live in his house, because the man's room rent will help pay for the house. It's a fine idea—logically. But the wife says: "I don't like him."

"Why?"

There's no answer. It rests with a simple statement. "I don't like him."

—And she was right.

AFRAID SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Glasgow, Kentucky.—"I was run-down, nervous, with no appetite. My side had given me trouble for five or six years. At times it was all I could do to live, and the doctor said I couldn't live but a short time longer without an operation. That was two years ago. My sister-in-law recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She had never used it herself, but she said one of her neighbors suffered just like I did, and it cured her. After I had taken four bottles the pain left my side. I had a fine appetite to eat anything that was put before me, and I began to do all my work and my washing, something I hadn't done for years. I am a dressmaker, and this last fall I began suffering with my side again, so I began taking the Vegetable Compound again. I am on my fourth bottle, which makes eight in all I have taken. I feel so much better when I take it and everybody tells me I look better. My appetite improves and I feel stronger in every way. I am a very nervous woman and it seems to help my nerves so much."—Mrs. MAGGIE WALLER, Glasgow, Ky.

Anson F. Hardman, well-known Ohio newspaper man and recently associate editor of The Morning Republican of Findlay, O., is now assistant to Randolph Elde, general manager of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company and in general charge of publicity and advertising. with a girl of 19 for nearly a year. I am in love with her and I think she loves me. But she is always finding fault with things I do and accusing me of going out with other girls. I am a musician and at present am playing with a very popular orchestra and am drawing a good salary. Don't you think if she really loved me she would trust and encourage me? She wants me to give up playing and get work some place where I can learn a trade. I have spoken of marriage but she will give no satisfaction as long as I insist on being a musician. I have spent four years learning to play a banjo and don't like to give it up. I love her dearly and would do almost anything for her, but I don't like to start at the bottom again. I am making much more than I would at any apprentice job and it would take a long time to get to the top again.

DANNY DREAMER. A fault-finder will spoil any marriage, whether it is the husband or the wife who has the failing. I would advise you to stay at the work you seem to enjoy so much. Keep on with your study of music and musical instruments and there is no reason why you should not make quite a place for yourself in the world. It is a man's right to choose for his profession something which appeals to him. Do not be turned aside from your purpose since your desire to follow music is so strong.

Hard to Forget Him Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 17 years old and a senior in high school. I have been going with a fellow for quite a while. I go with other boys but I seem to care more for him than all the rest I go with. He told me earnestly how much he cared for me but I don't think he meant what he said. He has many chances to go with other girls but he very seldom takes them. Lately he has been acting rather queerly. I haven't been with him for over three weeks. Some one told me he went with another girl from out of town, but I have never seen him with any. I spoke to him one Sunday afternoon during that time but he did not act like himself. He thinks I should do just as he tells me. Should I? During the last few weeks I have been going with another boy. He treats me any place I want to go, but still I do not care for him as much as I do for the other one. What shall I do? GLORIA. It is evident that the boy you care for does not care for you any longer, and therefore the only thing for you to do is to try to forget him. Have a good time with the other friends and forget about love for a while. Later on some one else will enter your life who will mean just as much to you and in the meantime content yourself with friendships. Of course you should not let any one influence you unless

A woman's intuition versus a man's logic! When those two rivals meet on the open field of matrimony, it's a great game. Probably there isn't a married man alive who doesn't know the rules. As a matter of fact, a lot of them keep score cards in their file of experience. Wise philosophers, modern and ancient, have recorded that woman's intuition has a funny habit of winning out.

When Wadsworth Camp wrote his prize story, "The Signal Tower," the Universal-Super-Jewel to be shown at the Ceramic theatre Saturday, he had a railroad man's wife in mind more than a railroad man. Virginia Valli, is starred as the wife, Clarence L. Brown directed with Rockliffe Fellowes and Wallace Beery supporting.

A man frequently will like another man and think he's a "good fellow." But let the wife meet this good fellow. At once she'll say, "I like him"—or, "I don't like him." And she's usually right. The railroad man hero of "The Signal Tower" brings a new tower operator home, a "good fellow," to live in his house, because the man's room rent will help pay for the house. It's a fine idea—logically. But the wife says: "I don't like him." "Why?" "There's no answer. It rests with a simple statement. 'I don't like him.'—And she was right."

LIVE FACTS ABOUT FARMING

Proper Plowing Aids in Getting Water Into Soil

Turning the Ground in the Fall Permits Rain to Seep Into Underlying Storehouse, Which Helps Crops in Dry Season.

THERE is more to plowing than merely turning the soil. By means of the plow, the grass, weeds and trash are put into the soil where they die and soon give their nutriment to the succeeding crop, and the vegetable matter loosens, mellows and improves the physical nature of the soil. Vegetable matter is what gives "heart" to the soil.

But plowing opens the compacted earth to the rainfall. Water is one of the most important factors of a good harvest. In areas of limited rainfall there often is not enough water that falls during the growing season to develop a crop to its maximum growth. This is true also in regions of much rain. Witness the loss of the tobacco crop in New England this year, of the light growth of corn in many sections of the East this past July and of the check to the cotton crop in several States during the same time. Lack of water in the soil and a small rainfall reduced the crop yields. It has ever been so and will always be so.

In the illustration is shown the effect of getting water into the soil. One of these plots was plowed for corn as ordinarily done in the Spring and not enough water has been available to carry the corn through the season. How different with the plot showing stronger growth! This area was plowed last Fall, and thus opened up to the Fall rains which entered the soil, not running off as was the case with the other plot.

Makes Growth in Dry Spells.

This area was plowed a second time in the Spring, at the same time as the other plot, and thus it took into its bosom additional water that has maintained growth right through the dry period. Western farmers are finding that it pays to list the land that is to be given to corn, each Fall, and then to plow in the Spring. The listing holds the water on the land, which gradually sinking in, becomes a storehouse of water supply the following Summer.

Fall plowing in the colder regions, which are so long bound tight by hard freezing, is beneficial because it admits the Fall rains into this water reservoir of the soil. Snow and ice, as they melt, flow off the soil, not into it. Hence, water is a problem in the snow and ice sections almost as important as it is in the semi-humid sections of the Great Plains district.

Water is lost in the South just as it is elsewhere. Having cover crops to help hold it from rapid washing away is of assistance just as is early plowing during the Winter months. Where soils are reasonably well filled with vegetable matter and precautions are taken to get water into the soil long before a Summer crop is planted, the risk of water shortage is reduced and a generous harvest may be expected, thus naturally adding to the yearly farm income.

What Every One Should Know How to Pluck an Apple Properly

IF apples are picked too soon they lack color and taste. Some varieties require high color to be marketable. Too early picking prevents the change from the sour taste of the unripe apple to a sweeter stage of the ripe apple. Size also is sacrificed if too early picking is done. An apple is at its right picking stage when it possesses the characteristic color of its variety and an average size of that variety.

As every one knows there is a small joint on the apple stem, and if the apple is properly held in the hand, the taking of the apple from the twig may be easily accomplished. If the apple is grasped and pulled away from the twig, the joint may break correctly, but the chances are the stem will be pulled out of the apple. Hence, this is not the way to pick apples from a tree.

The proper way of picking apples is to place the hand around the apple as if to prevent its falling to the ground; now by a twist of the free fingers or the other hand, sever the stem from

Growing Spinach in Cold Months

SPINACH comes closely in being a year-round crop, and it is the most important vegetable commonly used in the form of greens. It is more nutritious than most plants used in this manner and is especially recommended as a healthful source of vitamins and iron in the human system. It may be grown early and late in hotbeds and cold frames and during the growing season as a garden or field crop.

The Fall sowing in northern sections may be made from September 15 to October 10, and later accordingly as you go southward. A light soil, somewhat sandy and loamy, but of rich fertility gives best results with spinach. Well-rotted stable manure is helpful in making rapid, vigorous growth, very important in giving the best quality. The rows are usually planted 12 to 16 inches apart and the seed planted rather thickly. About a pound of seed will be required for one-twentieth of an acre. An ounce of seed will provide a small patch.

If planted early this Fall there will soon be plants available for use right up to Winter. Some light mulching is desirable for protection through the Winter and grown in this manner there will be provided an early supply for use next Spring.

Picking Pears

PEARS should be picked while they are still hard but when a yellow tone indicates that the fruit is approaching ripeness. A cool, dark place is best for ripening. The average farm cellar is satisfactory for the purpose. Place in baskets, boxes or in thin layers on shelves.

To develop the very finest specimens the individual pears may be wrapped in paper as soon as picked. This entails more work but the better quality secured is worth it. On the farm some of the best fruits may be so handled for extra long keeping.

101,000 Rural Churches, But Attendants Are Few

THERE is a great waste of religious potentialities in country districts and an urgent need for better distribution of rural churches is the belief of Dr. C. J. Galpin, of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dr. Galpin has made a wide study of the rural church situation.

"There are ten times as many churches for every thousand persons in some rural districts of the United States as there are in New York City," Dr. Galpin says. "Yet the percentage of attendance of every thousand persons is slightly lower in these rural sections than in New York."

"At the present time there are 101,000 rural churches. Only one-fifth of the rural population now goes to church," Dr. Galpin says. "Seven out of ten rural churches have only a few attendants. These rural pastors receive so low a salary they can live only by working at some other occupation."

A Test in Seeding Winter Wheat

IF you would care to make an experiment without expense, try this one with wheat at time of seeding. It will prove not only of interest, but may give a suggestion that will be worth many dollars to you in the subsequent fertilization of your wheat crop. For one thing, it will indicate what plant food is present or absent in your soil and will tell what kind of fertilizer you ought to buy next year.

This is the way the experiment is made: In your wheat field choose a section straight across the field that is of average condition and uniform for a breadth of ten widths of the seed drill. Make a trip back and forth with only one element of plant food—with nitrogen. This round across the field would be the first experimental plot. The second one, also a round across the field, would be only phosphorus—say, acid phosphate. The third plot would go to potash, the fourth to the three combined, or a complete fertilizer, and the fifth would be without any fertilizer.

The results will show whether fertilizers pay and will indicate what element is most likely to be deficient in your soil. The test may show that all of the elements of the usual kinds of commercial fertilizers are needed to secure the best yields, or that only one, or maybe two of them, is required. Of course, the best way to get the nitrogen is to grow it—with the legumes. When phosphorus and potash are lacking, the only recourse is to fertilizers, since these are mineral substances, not air materials.

This experiment may be tried with any crop. The Winter wheat planting season gives an opportunity to make the test this Fall.

How to Plant A Fruit Tree

FOR planting apple, pear and plum trees, October is an important month. Conditions are usually ideal, provided the preparation for planting has been made in season and the land is in order. The ground should be plowed deeply and the harrow run over sufficiently to give a fairly fine surface bed.

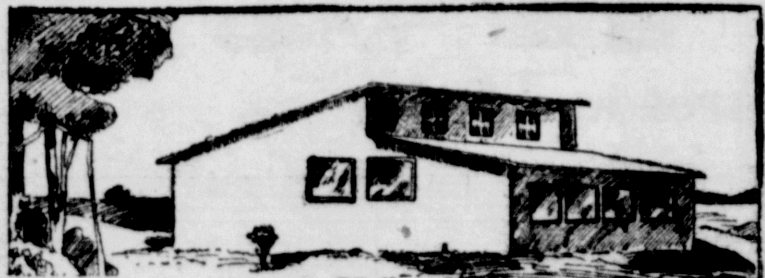

After deciding as to the rows, holes should be dug large enough to allow the roots to spread. All bruised and broken roots are to be trimmed off. Roots over-long should be shortened.

The earth at the bottom of the holes should be loosened and some top soil mixed in with it. On this dirt is set the roots of the little tree. Pack fine dirt around the roots with the fingers, leaving no air spaces. This done, fill in with fine soil and firm well with the feet.

After planting, cut back the branches to four or five buds by an upward cut with a sharp knife. The suggestions here made are equally applicable to apple, pear and plum trees. If the trees are strong, healthy and of good vitality to start with, they will for the most part survive the check of transplanting.

A Chicken House That Satisfies

ALL types of poultry houses are in use on American and Canadian farms. Some are good, some bad; some provide much sunlight, others little sunlight; some are free from draughts and yet provide fresh air in abundance, while others are damp, cold, unsatisfactory. Whatever type of house is provided, certain essentials must not be overlooked. They are sunlight, fresh air, no dampness, no overcrowding of fowls, and no drudgery in cleaning out.

A GOOD TYPE OF POULTRY HOUSE.

A type of house that provides all of these conditions is pictured here. In each end are glass windows, and at the top is a row of glass windows that are hinged at the upper end, so that in Summer the windows may be opened at the bottom, outward. The openings shown at the bottom, in front, are real openings—no muslin cloth, no glass, simply wire. In Summer and Winter no covering is put over these windows. The house keeps fresh, dry, and appeals to the fowls.

Did you ever notice that turkeys, chickens and other forms of poultry prefer open air to closed houses that are damp or otherwise uninviting? In Winter it is not the cold that causes trouble with the poultry flock; it is damp quarters and lack of dry, fresh air. All kinds of poultry are clothed in warm undergarments, and tight, warm undergarments. Hence, these open-front houses best serve the fowls. They are more naturally at home in such quarters. The construction of the house gives light, dryness and fresh air. The illustration clearly indicates that these conditions for poultry success are fully met.

This type of house is now in use in the warmer regions of the South, in New England, in the Middle West, the Northwest, and in Canada. No one needs to have any anxiety about its healthfulness. The cost of building is moderate. These hen houses are easily cared for, and in colder sections scratching facilities are provided. Little trouble is encountered in making over any other form of poultry house to meet requirements of this type.

Fairs May Offer Pure-Breds

THE fair season furnishes an excellent opportunity for securing pure-bred stock. This fact should not be lost sight of by those who visit the fairs. The reference here is not to show stock, as frequently it is hazardous to buy such because of the artificial way in which it has been fed. It refers to what is termed field stock.

Usually breeders bring fairly good selections, as commonplace stock would not look well in company which it would be in contact with at the fairs. The farmer who invests at such a time has a great opportunity to select. This, at least, is true of many lines of stock, and particularly of poultry, sheep and swine. But to get the best, he should visit the fair early and should be active in finding out what is on the grounds for sale.

Avoid Risk in Going Into Half-Filled Silo

EVERY year many deaths result from carelessness in entering silos partly filled with silage. Unless the doors are left open, and closed only as the cut corn fills up in the silo, the carbon dioxide gas that forms is unable to get out and causes death to any one entering. This gas is heavier than air and hence does not escape from the silo.

This danger may be avoided by keeping the doors open, only closing them as the silo fills up. In case this is not done any risk may be avoided by lowering a lighted lantern into the silo to the surface of the cut corn. If the lantern goes out, gas is present and entrance must be avoided until the gas is gotten rid of by opening the doors. If the lantern remains lighted it is safe to go down into the silo.

Tip to Housewife Gloxinias May Be Started from a Leaf

SOME farm women are natural florists. They have a love for flowers in the first place and they have a knack about starting plants that seldom results in failure. If you would try your hand at having next Spring the beautiful gloxinias, try this plan in securing your plants.

Start any time this month by taking the gloxinia leaves and planting these leaves. Fill a shallow box two-thirds full of good garden dirt. Cut off the leaves, leaving a short stem on each. Cut the rib that runs along the underside in several places crosswise of the leaf. Lay the leaf on the soil in the box, bury the stem, and sprinkle a handful of earth over the leaf. Make the soil moist and cover with a window pane. Set on the porch or elsewhere in the bright sunshine.

You will get a bulb at each place where the midrib was cut, and there will be one also at the end of the stem. As many as five may be grown on one leaf, but of course you must not let the soil or the leaves get dry. Keep these growing during the winter and use these young plants for your blossoms the following Spring.

Hogging Down Corn with Most Profit

CORN belt farmers follow the practice of letting the hogs harvest the corn to a very considerable extent. Certain experimental tests show that hogs in the corn field will make slightly more rapid gains than others fed ear corn in the feed lot and require approximately 6 per cent less concentrates to yield 100 pounds of gain.

In hogging-down corn, supplementary feed such as alfalfa, clover, soy beans or rape is desirable, but if one of these is not available a quarter of a pound of tankage per pig per day should be provided. At the Ohio agricultural experiment station it was ascertained that hogs so fed on tankage gained at the rate of 1.8 pounds a day, whereas other hogs on green corn gained but 1.3 pounds a day. After deducting the cost of the tankage, the value of the corn was increased 18 cents a bushel because of the inclusion of tankage in the feeding ration. That is, every bushel of corn consumed by the hogs fetched in live pork 18 cents more than where no tankage was provided.

Whether Farm Boy Should Go to College and What It Means

Expert Discusses Opportunities Which Are Before the Rural Youths and Gives Advice to Young Men in Doubt.

By CHARLES W. BURKETT.

Famous Agricultural Author and Editor of Farm Life Extension Service.

IT is now twenty-nine years since I, a young country boy, left home for college. That is a pretty long time, and time enough certainly to know if it paid. I am led to say a few words about the subject because many farm boys and parents of farm boys are asking me if I would advise the boys whether they should go to college this Fall.

"Would I go to college again, were I a young chap of eighteen or nineteen years old?" I did go; and I started twenty-nine years ago with seventeen dollars in my pocket, with good health, a stout heart and an honest determination to win that education. Were it all to be done over again, I would go again and likely follow the same course I then took.

I believe in education, in farm education for farm boys who expect to farm. Our agricultural colleges rank with the very best in the world. You will find no better teachers, no more earnest instructors, no more inspiring leaders than those workers in our agricultural schools and colleges. Nor will you find in any college a finer set of boys than in these same institutions.

NOT ALL BOYS SHOULD GO.

Not all boys should go to college. Many do not want to go. But everybody who wants to work fairly, who wants to do his part in the service for humanity, who wants to make the home farm better and more productive, who wants to make his light shine in his community, should go to college. The boy who is lazy, trifling, who is a spendthrift, who feels no call to better things is better off away from college than a student in it.

If I were a boy again and were making plans to go to college, I would go to my State agricultural college. I would also take the agricultural course. In doing so I would know that I was fitting myself to an honorable calling; and furthermore that such a course would do for me in training my heart and mind and soul as thorough a service as offered by any course of study in the college catalog. After an experience of nearly thirty years I am able to say that agricultural students measure up with students in other courses to their best credit, and that if there is any difference in power, influence, success, the agricultural students have the best of the comparison.

A CREED TO FOLLOW.

To those boys who would go to college let me say: Go, and God bless you; but work hard, live clean, be honest and square, and never forget the folks at home. Your best college training will be to learn these things. Some will sneer at them, some will scoff if you follow them, but these are the foundations of a life of success. No college education is worth the cost that teaches any other philosophy or establishes any other style of ideals. The boy who lives these things will profit and his education will be worth all the sacrifices, heartaches and handicaps its pursuit occasions.

When Cauliflower Has Quality

THE value of cauliflower depends upon the development of the heads, and especially upon their whiteness. When the heads are exposed to the hot sun they frequently develop a greenish or purplish color, always accompanied by a loss of the delicate flavor so much desired.

Well Developed Cauliflower.

After the heads become well developed it is a common practice to gather up the leaves and tie them in this position over the head. This keeps out direct sunlight, blanches the head a snowy white, and develops the highest possible quality. A little experience is required in order to know the proper stage for harvesting to obtain the delicate flavor that is wanted. When the heads become too old they "break" and lose their whiteness.

Cauliflower is cut in exactly the same way as cabbage. The heads are trimmed by cutting the leaves from a half inch to an inch beyond the face of the head. The white head is left surrounded by a fringe of stubby green, which serves to protect the delicate structure in packing and shipping.

Keeping Butter All Winter

ON many farms more milk is produced during Summer than in the Winter months. During the period of heavy flow it is not a bad idea to use this surplus for making butter, storing it for later use when the supply is limited and the price of butter is higher. The trouble that most people have who do this is to keep the butter from getting strong after it is a few weeks old.

Here is an old recipe, which if properly carried out, will keep butter fresh and maintain its sweet flavor for a period of ten to twelve months. The plan follows:

Take three gallons of water, one half gallon of salt, two cups of brown sugar and two table spoons of salt-peter. Boil all together for three hours, slowly, as a slimmer, and do not boil hard; then strain into a large stone jar. As the butter is made, wrap in butter-paper and clean cloths and sink it into the liquid by stone weights. Make the butter in one pound packages and use as wanted. It will taste like fresh butter when used.

ALL SOIL NEEDS LIME

Lime is not a panacea for all troubles, but if there is a deficiency of lime in the soil, clover will not thrive. On land where clover is a failure everything else will be a failure by and by.

Walks and Talks on the Farm How to Keep Eggs Fresh All Winter.

NOT many farmers use liquid preparations for preserving eggs. Fortunately they do not need to do so, since they usually get a supply of fresh eggs from the farm flock. Nevertheless, eggs do get rather scarce during the early Winter and late Fall months. Several dozens of eggs stored away in the cellar are always a handy resource to have, and they may be used even if fresh eggs are available. Anyhow, the best time to sell eggs is when eggs are scarce.

Of course, the best time to preserve eggs is in the Spring, when eggs are cheap and abundant. But the farmer's wife who has never done so hesitates to make the experiment. Therefore, to be in readiness for the next season, it would be a good plan to try a few dozen to get your "hand in." Eggs are still available for the purpose.

Among the liquid preservatives, water glass has been generally and successfully used because it is reliable, easily prepared and comparatively cheap. It can be bought at most drug stores at about $1.50 a gallon. A gallon will make ten gallons of preserving fluid. Eggs have been kept in this mixture for four years without developing any unpleasant taste or smell.

WHAT TO PUT THEM IN.

To preserve eggs by this method, use any water-tight receptacles—kegs and stone jars are commonly

This area was plowed last Fall, and thus opened up to the Fall rains which entered the soil, not running off as was the case with the other plot.

Makes Growth in Dry Spells.

This area was plowed a second time in the Spring, at the same time as the other plot, and thus it took into its bosom additional water that has maintained growth right through the dry period. Western farmers are finding that it pays to list the land that is to be given to corn, each Fall, and then to plow in the Spring. The listing holds the water on the land, which gradually sinking in, becomes a storehouse of water supply the following Summer.

Fall plowing in the colder regions, which are so long bound tight by hard freezing, is beneficial because it admits the Fall rains into this water reservoir of the soil. Snow and ice, as they melt, flow off the soil, not into it. Hence, water is a problem in the snow and ice sections almost as important as it is in the semi-humid sections of the Great Plains district.

Water is lost in the South just as it is elsewhere. Having cover crops to help hold it from rapid washing away is of assistance just as is early plowing during the Winter months. Where soils are reasonably well filled with vegetable matter and precautions are taken to get water into the soil long before a Summer crop is planted, the risk of water shortage is reduced and a generous harvest may be expected, thus naturally adding to the yearly farm income.

What Every One Should Know How to Pluck an Apple Properly

IF apples are picked too soon they lack color and taste. Some varieties require high color to be marketable. Too early picking prevents the change from the sour taste of the unripe apple to a sweeter stage of the ripe apple. Size also is sacrificed if too early picking is done. An apple is at its right picking stage when it possesses the characteristic color of its variety and an average size of that variety.

As every one knows there is a small joint on the apple stem, and if the apple is properly held in the hand, the taking of the apple from the twig may be easily accomplished. If the apple is grasped and pulled away from the twig, the joint may break correctly, but the chances are the stem will be pulled out of the apple. Hence, this is not the way to pick apples from a tree.

The proper way of picking apples is to place the hand around the apple as if to prevent its falling to the ground; now by a twist of the free fingers or the other hand, sever the stem from

Growing Spinach in Cold Months

SPINACH comes closely in being a year-round crop, and it is the most important vegetable commonly used in the form of greens. It is more nutritious than most plants used in this manner and is especially recommended as a healthful source of vitamins and iron in the human system. It may be grown early and late in hotbeds and cold frames and during the growing season as a garden or field crop.

The Fall sowing in northern sections may be made from September 15 to October 10, and later accordingly as you go southward. A light soil, somewhat sandy and loamy, but of rich fertility gives best results with spinach. Well-rotted stable manure is helpful in making rapid, vigorous growth, very important in giving the best quality. The rows are usually placed 12 to 16 inches apart and the seed planted rather thickly. About a pound of seed will be required for one-twentieth of an acre. An ounce of seed will provide a small patch.

If planted early this Fall there will soon be plants available for use right up to Winter. Some light mulching is desirable for protection through the Winter and grown in this manner there will be provided an early supply for use next Spring.

Picking Pears

PEARS should be picked while they are still hard but when a yellow tone indicates that the fruit is approaching ripeness. A cool, dark place is best for ripening. The average farm cellar is satisfactory for the purpose. Place in baskets, boxes or in thin layers on shelves.

To develop the very finest specimens the individual pears may be wrapped in paper as soon as picked. This entails more work but the better quality secured is worth it. On the farm some of the best fruits may be so handled for extra long keeping.

101,000 Rural Churches, But Attendants Are Few

THERE is a great waste of religious potentialities in country districts and an urgent need for better distribution of rural churches is the belief of Dr. C. J. Galpin, of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dr. Galpin has made a wide study of the rural church situation.

"There are ten times as many churches for every thousand persons in some rural districts of the United States as there are in New York City," Dr. Galpin says. "Yet the percentage of attendance of every thousand persons is slightly lower in these rural sections than in New York."

"At the present time there are 101,000 rural churches. Only one-fifth of the rural population now goes to church," Dr. Galpin says, "and seven out of ten rural churches have only a fraction of a pastor apiece and one-third of these rural pastors receive so low a salary they can live only by working at some other occupation."

A Test in Seeding Winter Wheat

IF you would care to make an experiment without expense, try this one with wheat at time of seeding. It will prove not only of interest, but may give a suggestion that will be worth many dollars to you in the subsequent fertilization of your wheat crop. For one thing, it will indicate what plant food is present or absent in your soil and will tell what kind of fertilizer you ought to buy next year.

This is the way the experiment is made:

In your wheat field choose a section straight across the field that is of average condition and uniform for a breadth of ten widths of the seed drill. Make a trip back and forth with only one element of plant food—with nitrogen. This round across the field would be the first experimental plot. The second one, also a round across the field, would be only phosphorus—say, acid phosphate. The third plot would go to potash, the fourth to the three combined, or a complete fertilizer, and the fifth would be without any fertilizer.

The results will show whether fertilizers pay and will indicate what element is most likely to be deficient in your soil. The test may show that all of the elements of the usual kinds of commercial fertilizers are needed to secure the best yields, or that only one, or maybe two of them, is required. Of course, the best way to get the nitrogen is to grow it—with the legumes. When phosphorus and potash are lacking, the only recourse is to fertilizers, since these are mineral substances, not air materials.

This experiment may be tried with any crop. The Winter wheat planting season gives an opportunity to make the test this Fall.

How to Plant A Fruit Tree

FOR planting apple, pear and plum trees, October is an important month. Conditions are usually ideal, provided the preparation for planting has been made in season and the land is in order. The ground should be plowed deeply and the harrow run over sufficiently to give a fairly fine surface bed. After deciding as to the rows, holes should be dug large enough to allow the roots to spread. All bruised and broken roots are to be trimmed off. Roots over-long should be shortened.

The earth at the bottom of the hole should be loosened and some top soil mixed in with it. On this dirt is set the roots of the little tree. Pack fine dirt around the roots with the fingers, leaving no air spaces. This done, fill in with fine soil and firm well with the feet.

After planting, cut back the branches to four or five buds by an upward cut with a sharp knife. The suggestions here made are equally applicable to apple, pear and plum trees. If the trees are strong, healthy and of good vitality to start with, they will for the most part survive the check of transplanting.

A Chicken House That Satisfies

ALL types of poultry houses are in use on American and Canadian farms. Some are good, some bad; some provide much sunlight, others little sunlight; some are free from draughts and yet provide fresh air in abundance, while others are damp, cold, unsatisfactory. Whatever type of house is provided, certain essentials must not be overlooked. They are sunlight, fresh air, no dampness, no overcrowding of fowls, and no drudgery in cleaning out.

A GOOD TYPE OF POULTRY HOUSE.

A type of house that provides all of these conditions is pictured here. In each end are glass windows, and at the top is a row of glass windows that are hinged at the upper end, so that in Summer the windows may be opened at the bottom, outward. The openings shown at the bottom, in front, are real openings—no muslin cloth, no glass, simply wire. In Summer and Winter no covering is put over these windows. The house keeps fresh, dry, and appeals to the fowls.

Did you ever notice that turkeys, chickens and other forms of poultry prefer open air to closed houses that are damp or otherwise uninviting? In Winter it is not the cold that causes trouble with the poultry flock; it is damp quarters and lack of dry, fresh air. All kinds of poultry are clothed in warm undergarments. Hence, these open-front houses best serve the fowls. They are more naturally at home in such quarters. The construction of the house gives light, dryness and fresh air. The illustration clearly indicates that these conditions for poultry success are fully met.

This type of house is now in use in the warmer regions of the South, in New England, in the Middle West, the Northwest, and in Canada. No one needs to have any anxiety about its healthfulness. The cost of building is moderate, within the means of any purse. These hen houses are easily cared for, and in colder sections scratching facilities are provided. Little trouble is encountered in making over any other form of poultry house to meet requirements of this type.

Fairs May Offer Pure-Breds

THE fair season furnishes an excellent opportunity for securing pure-bred stock. This fact should not be lost sight of by those who visit the fairs. The reference here is not to show stock, as frequently it is hazardous to buy such because of the artificial way in which it has been fed. It refers to what is termed field stock.

Usually breeders bring fairly good selections, as commonplace stock would not look well in company with the fair stock. The farmer who invests at such a time has a great opportunity to select. This, at least, is true of many lines of stock, and particularly of poultry, sheep and swine. But to get the best, he should visit the fair early and should be active in finding out what is on the grounds for sale.

Whether Farm Boy Should Go to College and What It Means

Expert Discusses Opportunities Which Are Before the Rural Youths and Gives Advice to Young Men in Doubt.

By CHARLES W. BURKETT.

Famous Agricultural Author and Editor of Farm Life Extension Service.

IT is now twenty-nine years since I, a young country boy, left home for college. That is a pretty long time, and time enough certainly to know if it paid. I am led to say a few words about the subject because many farm boys and parents of farm boys are asking me if I would advise the boys whether they should go to college this Fall.

"Would I go to college again, were I a young chap of eighteen or nineteen years old?" I did go; and I started twenty-nine years ago with seventeen dollars in my pocket, with good health, a stout heart and an honest determination to win that education. Were it all to be done over again, I would go again and likely follow the same course I then took.

I believe in education, in farm education for farm boys who expect to farm. Our agricultural colleges rank with the very best in the world. You will find no better teachers, no more earnest instructors, no more inspiring leaders than those workers in our agricultural schools and colleges. Nor will you find in any college a finer set of boys than in these same institutions.

NOT ALL BOYS SHOULD GO.

Not all boys should go to college. Many do not want to go. But everybody who wants to work fairly, who wants to do his part in the service for humanity, who wants to make the home farm better and more productive, who wants to make his light shine in his community, should go to college. The boy who is lazy, trifling, who is a spendthrift, who feels no call to better things is better off away from college than a student in it.

If I were a boy again and were making plans to go to college, I would go to my State agricultural college that would also take the agricultural course. In doing so I would know that I was fitting myself to an honorable calling; and furthermore that such a course would do for me in training my heart and mind and soul as thorough a service as offered by any course of study in the college catalog. After an experience of nearly thirty years I am able to say that agricultural students measure up with students in other courses to their best credit, and that if there is any difference in power, influence, success, the agricultural students have the best of the comparison.

A CREED TO FOLLOW.

To those boys who would go to college let me say: Go, and God bless you; but work hard, live clean, be honest and square, and never forget the folks at home. Your best college training will be to learn these things. Some will sneer at them, some will scoff if you follow them, but these are the foundations of a life of success. No college education is worth the cost that teaches any other philosophy or establishes any other style of ideals. The boy who lives these things will profit and his education will be worth all the sacrifices, heartaches and handicaps its pursuit occasions.

When Cauliflower Has Quality

THE value of cauliflower depends upon the development of the heads, and especially upon their whiteness. When the heads are exposed to the hot sun they frequently develop a greenish or purplish color, always accompanied by a loss of the delicate flavor so much desired.

Well Developed Cauliflower.

After the heads become well developed it is a common practice to gather up the leaves and tie them in this position over the head. This keeps out direct sunlight, blanches the head a snowy white, and develops the highest possible quality. A little experience is required in order to know the proper stage for harvesting to obtain the delicate flavor that is wanted. When the heads become too old they "break" and lose their whiteness.

Cauliflower is cut in exactly the same way as cabbage. The heads are trimmed by cutting the leaves from a half inch to an inch beyond the face of the head. The white head is left surrounded by a fringe of stubby green, which serves to protect the delicate structure in packing and shipping.

Keeping Butter All Winter

ON many farms more milk is produced during Summer than in the Winter months. During the period of heavy flow it is not a bad idea to use this surplus for making butter, storing it for later use when the supply is limited and the price of butter is higher. The trouble that most people have who do this is to keep the butter from getting strong after it is a few weeks old.

Here is an old recipe, which if properly carried out, will keep butter fresh and maintain its sweet flavor for a period of ten to twelve months. The plan follows:

Take three gallons of water, one half gallon of salt, two cups of brown sugar and two table spoons of salt-peter. Boil all together for three hours, slowly, as a shiner, and do not boil hard; then strain into a large stone jar. As the butter is made, wrap in butter-paper and clean cloths and sink it into the liquid by stone weights. Make the butter in one pound packages and use as wanted. It will taste like fresh butter when used.

ALL SOIL NEEDS LIME

Lime is not a panacea for all troubles, but if there is a deficiency of lime in the soil, clover will not thrive. On land where clover is a failure everything else will be a failure by and by.

Hogging Down Corn with Most Profit

CORN belt farmers follow the practice of letting the hogs harvest the corn to a very considerable extent. Certain experimental tests show that hogs in the corn field will make slightly more rapid gains than others fed ear corn in the feed lot and require approximately 6 per cent less concentrates to yield 100 pounds of gain.

In hogging-down corn, supplemental feed such as alfalfa, clover, soy beans or rape is desirable, but if one of these is not available a quarter of a pound of tankage per pig per day should be provided. At the Ohio agricultural experiment station it was ascertained that hogs so fed on tankage gained at the rate of 1.8 pounds a day, whereas other hogs on green corn gained but 1.3 pounds a day. After deducting the cost of the tankage, the value of the corn was increased 18 cents a bushel because of the inclusion of tankage in the feeding ration. That is, every bushel of corn consumed by the hogs fetched in live pork 18 cents more than where no tankage was provided.

Walks and Talks on the Farm How to Keep Eggs Fresh All Winter.

NOT many farmers use liquid preparations for preserving eggs. Fortunately they do not need to do so, since they usually get a supply of fresh eggs from the farm flock. Nevertheless, eggs do rot rather scarce during the early Winter and late Fall months. Several dozens of eggs stored away in the cellar are always a handy resource to have, and they may be used even if fresh eggs are available. Anyhow, the best time to sell eggs is when eggs are scarce.

Of course, the best time to preserve eggs is in the Spring, when eggs are cheap and abundant, and the farmer's wife who has never done so hesitates to make the experiment. Therefore, to be in readiness for the next season, it would be a good plan to try a few dozen to get your "hand in." Eggs are still available for the purpose.

Among the liquid preservatives, water glass has been generally and successfully used because it is reliable, easily prepared and comparatively cheap. It can be bought at most drug stores at about $1.50 a gallon. A gallon will make ten gallons of preserving fluid. Eggs have been kept in this mixture for four years without developing any unpleasant taste or smell.

WHAT TO PUT THEM IN.

To preserve eggs by this method, use any water-tight receptacles—kegs and stone jars are commonly

DR. W. E. BIEDERWOLF DEFINES CHRISTIANITY'S SPURPOSE

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, in his sermon Wednesday evening, said:
John 5:8, "Rise, Take Up Thy Bed and Walk."
There are some fellows who won't go into the Kingdom of God at all unless they can go in head-first. God never said, "My son, give me your head."

He said, "My son, give me your heart." You tackle this thing of becoming a Christian with your head alone and you'll have a head-on collision about one minute after you get started. If nothing else will do you but head work, about the best thing that could happen to you would be to run your old head up against some of the solid and mysterious facts of God and get a little horse sense knocked into it, and then maybe you'd call your heart up alongside of your head and move on the way God meant you to. If ever there was a hopeless case pen to you would be to run your old head up against some of the solid and mysterious facts of God and get a little horse sense knocked into it, and then maybe you'd call your heart up alongside of your head and move on the way God meant you to. If ever there was a hopeless case it was this man at the pool of Bethesda. There was a portico, a pentagonal peristyle, around a pool and it was crowded every day with patients, and this poor fellow I'm telling you about had lain there for thirty-eight years, a hopeless paralytic with his dreamy eyes fixed on the healing waters he couldn't reach. It was an intermittent spring and the waters only boiled up for a few minutes at a time and I suppose he had tried in the nick of time but always someone else less helpless than himself had beat him to it.

No Man To Aid.

He had waited there so long that despair akin to utter imbecility was written all over his face, and one day a magnetic looking stranger came along and asked him if he wanted to be healed. He said to him, "Wilt thou be made whole?" and I can hear the poor fellow begin to talk while the hope that was dead within him commenced to revive and he says, "Why yes, man that's what I'm lying here for; I've been coming here for thirty-eight years to be healed and don't I look like I need it. I have lain here gazing on those healing waters, and I've seen others healed and I know it can heal me and yet here I am. Am I willing to be made whole? Why, of course I am, but I have no man to put me into the pool when the water is troubled." Now stranger you stand by and when the water is troubled get me in quick, and when I'm cured if there's anything I can ever do for you all you've got to do is to let me know." And while he was talking his eye met the stranger's gaze and there was a tenderness in it he had never seen in any human's eye before and he had a countenance such as he had never before seen any mortal being bear, and as he looked the stranger spoke again with a voice that seemed to thrill the helpless limbs with vigor, and Jesus said, "Rise, take up thy bed and walk."

Rise? How could he rise? If he could rise he could not have been lying there for eight and thirty years. But he did rise "when Jesus told him to for when he made the effort, though utterly helpless, into his lifeless crippled limbs quicker and more powerful than the current of the mightiest dynamo passed all the energy and might of the living God himself. Oh, my brother, here is a great truth: "To them that obey Him he is the author of eternal life." Do you remember the ten lepers that came to Jesus and asked him to heal them, and Jesus said, "Go show yourself to the high priest, the health officer" and did they say as they held their diseased hands out, No, but they went and "as they went "Why Lord, we can't go this way!" they were healed."

And so I come to you with the message of Jesus Christ tonight. I don't care who you are or how far away from God you've been, if you want to be made whole Jesus can do the business for you. You say you've always been troubled with doubt and the way is dark, RISE and the light will shine and Christ will lead you out. You say your temptation is bitter and your passion is too strong, RISE and the chains will snap and Christ will set you free, and God's might will take the place of your weakness.

There are hundreds of you in this city and in this tabernacle, poor, palsied, paralytic, hell-bound souls, who need Christ as much as ever did that poor fellow at the pool of Bethesda, but the great trouble with so many of you is that you are not willing to test the reality of religion and put to the proof the thing that Jesus says.

Western Water Pool.

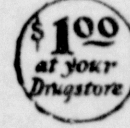

In some parts of the west the stockmen build a wall around the big pool of water to keep the cattle from wading in and making the water muddy. Then they build a platform over the pool and put a trench at one side of it. The trough can't be seen from the outside. One day an old ox reared up on his hind feet and looked over the platform and said to the rest of them, "There ain't a drop of water in it!" Huxley got up and looked and said, "There's nothing in it," an Haeckel and Spencer and Andy Carnegie say, "There's nothing in it," but an old one thirsty for water says to the rest, "Come on," and he goes around the wall and walks out onto that platform and the weight of his body forces the pure gurgling water up into the trough and he drinks and is satisfied. Yes, they say, "There's nothing in it," but you let the poor sinner walk out on the promise of God and the water of life will spring up in his soul and he can drink and see that it is good.

An then what? "Take up thy bed." You'll not have any further use for it. Roll it up. Tie it up. Lug it away.

Women's Minor Ills come from one cause

Chronic constipation is the plague of their lives, but thousands keep healthy with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

WOMEN are so accustomed to finding themselves constipated that they are apt to make matters worse by indifference. Unfortunately many seem to think that it is easier to give the appearance of health with cosmetics, or stifle a headache with an opiate, than to remove the real cause by taking a good laxative.

The pill habit, of course, is not to be recommended, but any woman can take such a mild laxative as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with assurance that the dose can gradually be decreased and that there will be no shock or weakening of the system.

As is generally known, Syrup Pepsin is a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. A spoonful will clean out the impacted matter and make you feel well by morning.

You should take a dose when you feel the slightest symptom of constipation, such as biliousness, flatulency, lassitude, loss of appetite, restless sleep, bad breath, dull eyes, sallow skin, and to stop fevers and colds. Many do not wait for these symptoms, but take Syrup Pepsin regularly once a week. Mrs. Mary J. White, 122 Cedar Ave., Camden, N. J., and Mrs. L. H. Edwards, Palisade, Colo., say that much of their excellent health can be ascribed to Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The other members of the family also use it as, being free from opiates and narcotics, it is perfectly safe, even for infants.

More than ten million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sold annually, the largest sale in the world. If you have been in the habit of using strong cathartic pills, salt waters or "candy cathartics," which contain a coal-tar drug called phenolphthalein, we especially urge you to try this milder method. You will have a better, freer passage and without strain or gripe. A bottle can be had at any drug store and the average cost is less than a cent a dose.

Free Sample Bottle Coupon

There are people who very rightly prefer to try a thing before they buy it. Let them clip this coupon, pin their name and address to it, and send it to the Pepsin Syrup Co., 518 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois, and a free sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will be sent them postpaid by mail. Do not inclose postage. It is free.

Why you need TWO watches

At the desk, on the train, or for outdoor play, a turn of the wrist should quickly tell you the time. So men and women both have come to depend upon the strap watch.

Yet with evening dress, a man's strap watch becomes out of place, and a woman's sport model an ornament of doubtful taste. Thus convenience and correct dress demand that you possess two watches—a strap watch for business and the sports, and a dress watch for social wear.

If you would choose correctly, examine our extensive assortment of reliable watches dressed in the well-known Wadsworth Cases.

Chronic constipation is the plague of their lives, but thousands keep healthy with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

WOMEN are so accustomed to finding themselves constipated that they are apt to make matters worse by indifference. Unfortunately many seem to think that it is easier to give the appearance of health with cosmetics, or stifle a headache with an opiate, than to remove the real cause by taking a good laxative.

The pill habit, of course, is not to be recommended, but any woman can take such a mild laxative as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with assurance that the dose can gradually be decreased and that there will be no shock or weakening of the system.

As is generally known, Syrup Pepsin is a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. A spoonful will clean out the impacted matter and make you feel well by morning.

You should take a dose when you feel the slightest symptom of constipation, such as biliousness, flatulency, lassitude, loss of appetite, restlessness, bad breath, dull eyes, sallow skin, and to stop fevers and colds. Many do not wait for these symptoms, but take Syrup Pepsin regularly once a week. Mrs. Mary J. White, 122 Cedar Ave., Camden, N. J., and Mrs. L. H. Edwards, Palisade, Colo., say that much of their excellent health can be ascribed to Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The other members of the family also use it as, being free from opiates and narcotics, it is perfectly safe, even for infants.

More than ten million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sold annually, the largest sale in the world. If you have been in the habit of using strong cathartic pills, salt waters or "candy cathartics," which contain a coal-tar drug called phenolphthalein, we especially urge you to try this milder method. You will have a better, freer passage and without strain or gripe. A bottle can be had at any drug store and the average cost is less than a cent a dose.

Free Sample Bottle Coupon

There are people who very rightly prefer to try a thing before they buy it. Let them clip this coupon, pin their name and address to it, and send it to the Syrup Pepsin Co., 518 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois, and a free sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will be sent them postpaid by mail. Do not inclose postage. It is free.

Why you need TWO watches

At the desk, on the train, or for outdoor play, a turn of the wrist should quickly tell you the time. So men and women both have come to depend upon the strap watch.

Yet with evening dress, a man's strap watch becomes out of place, and a woman's sport model an ornament of doubtful taste. Thus convenience and correct dress demand that you possess two watches—a strap watch for business and the sports, and a dress watch for social wear.

If you would choose correctly, examine our extensive assortment of reliable watches dressed in the well-known Wadsworth Cases.

M. Brookes also assumes that office January 1, as does Sheriff-elect George Wright. No intimation has been given by either Mr. Brookes or Mr. Wright as to the personnel of co-workers.

Probate Judge Lodge Riddle will not take office for his second term until February 9, next. His term extends for four years.

These are the only county officials elected at the last election to take office early in the new year.

County Surveyor Lloyd C. Kirk will take office next August.

In the case of Mr. Kirk, however, his term by a law passed by the last legislature will extend until January 1, 1928, at which time the term of every county surveyor in the state will expire. Thereafter elections will be held every two years, and with the term of office expiring with the close of the year for a two-year term. By this plan surveyors will go in office in a dull season and not retire, as is now the case, right in the heart of the new construction period.

FINAL SHIPMENT OF TUBERCULARS

Three cars of tuberculin cattle were loaded out of Salem this week for the Cleveland market, and according to Phil E. Heim, county live stock shipping agent, this shipment will about clear the county of all "T. B." cattle found during the recent cleanup test.

Dr. E. E. Stoner, of Salem, who was to begin retest work in Franklin township this month, has been delayed in this program because his services have been required to go here and there about the county testing those few herds that were missed when the state testers were in the county.

"There may be a few tuberculin cattle to ship away after Dr. Stoner completes his work, but there will not be very many in my opinion," Mr. Heim explained today. "There were 78 head of tuberculin cattle in the three cars we shipped out of Salem."

STUDENTS WORK ON SAIL PLANES

Machines, Minus Motors, Need Opposite Winds to Remain Aloft.

ROME—On the high plateau of Asago, in the north of Italy, a series of experiments in aviation, using machines without motors, has just been completed. The machines (vele) are not visible in these machines, but the planes are thus named because their method of moving is very much the same as that of a sailboat. They must proceed in a zigzag manner, like a boat tacking, taking advantage of currents of air, preferably contrary, in order to advance.

The trials of the Italian planes are especially interesting as their two machines are the result of the studies and the actual constructive work of nineteen students of the University of Padua, who are not enrolled in the course of engineering, as might naturally be supposed. They have spent much time in investigating machines of all sorts in Germany, France and England, and their two planes are a combination of ideas and plans of various types.

The method of starting was unusual. Elastic cords having been attached to a hook at the prow, a number of young men caught the cord-ends and ran ahead, while the machine was held at the back by another company of youths. When the pilot gave the word to let go, the men at the back loosed their hold, and those in front gave a final pull and threw themselves on the ground at the sides of the machine.

The planes rose, and, although they remained in the air but a certain number of seconds, the persons interested consider that the experiments were successful and promise well for the future.

Every lady attending the matinee at the American Theatre Wed., Thurs. and Fri., Nov. 12, 13 and 14, will receive a loaf of Betsy Ross Bread free.

MAKES FAT PEOPLE SLIM

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight.

The loss of as much as a pound of excess fat a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Dept. R-34.

Now and then Carson sent a quick questioning glance toward Lee's inscrutable face; now and then he sighed, his thoughts his own. Bud Lee, knowing his companion as he did, shrewdly guessed that Carson was hoping that events might so befall that there would be an open, free-for-all fight and that he might not be forced to play the restless part of a mere onlooker. Bud Lee hoped otherwise.

"There's two ways to get a man," said Carson meditatively, out of a long silence. "An' both is good ways; with a gun or with your hands."

"Yes," agreed Bud quietly.

"If it works out gun way," continued Carson, still with that thoughtful, half-abstracted look in his eyes, "it don't hurt to remember, Bud, that he shoots left-handed an' from the hip."

Lee merely nodded. Carson did not look up from the bobbing ears of his horse as he continued: "If it works out the other way an' it's just fists, it don't hurt to remember how Trevors put out Scotty Webb last year in Rocky Bend. Four-footed style, striking with his boot square in Scotty's belly."

Trevors' name was not again referred to even in the vaguest terms. The road in front of them, at last dropping down into the valley in which the lumber camp was, straightened out into a lane that ran between stumps to the clutter of frame buildings.

"Something doing at the office," offered Carson, as they drew near. "Directors' meeting, likely."

Two automobiles stood in the road ten steps from the closed door of the unpretentious shack which bore the printed legend, "Office, Western Lumber Company." The big red touring car certainly belonged to Melvin, the company's president. Carson looked curiously at Lee.

Bud dismounted, dropped his horse's reins, shifted the revolver from his shirt to his belt where it was at once unhidden and loosely held, ready for a quick draw. Then he went up the three steps, Carson at his heels, his gun also unhidden and ready. From within came voices, one in protest, Bayne Trevors' ringing out, filled with mastery followed by a laugh. Lee set his hand to the door. Then, only because it was locked from within, did he knock sharply.

"Who is it?" came the sharp inquiry. But the man who made it and who was standing by the door, threw it open.

"What do you want?" he demanded again. "We're busy."

"I want to see Trevors," said Lee coolly.

"You can't. He—"

Lee shoved the man aside and strode on. Carson, closely at Lee's heels, his eyes glittering, stepped a little aside when once he was within the room and took his place with his back against the wall close to the door.

It was a big, bare, barnlike room, furnished simply with one long table and half a dozen chairs. Here were five men besides Bayne Trevors. All except Trevors and the man who had opened the door were seated; Trevors, at the far end of the room, was standing, an oratorical arm slowly dropping to his side.

His eyes met Lee's, ran quickly to Carson's, came back to Lee's and rested there steadily. Beyond the slow falling of his extended arm, he did not move. The muscles of his face hardened, the look of triumph which just now had stood in his eyes changed slowly and in its place came an expression that was twin to that in Bud Lee's eyes, just a look of inscrutability with a hint of watchfulness under it, and the hardness of agate. While a man might have drawn a deep breath into his lungs and expelled it, neither Lee nor Trevors stirred.

"What the devil is this?" demanded Melvin from across the table. "Hold up or what?" He rapped the table resoundingly.

"Shut up!" snapped Carson. "It's just a two-man play, Melvin; Lee an' Trevors."

"Oh," said Melvin, and sank back, making no further protest. He was no stranger to Carson or to Bud Lee, and he sensed what might lie between Lee and a man like Trevors. Then, shrugging his shoulders, he said carelessly: "I'm not the man to get in other men's way, and you know it, Carson. But you might tell your friend, Bud Lee, that Bayne Trevors is rather a big man influentially to mix things with. I've just resigned this morning and Trevors is our new president."

"Thanks," returned Carson dryly. "I don't think that'll make much difference though, Melvin. Most likely you'll have two presidents resigning the same day."

At last Lee spoke.

"Trevors," he said quietly, "maybe the law can't get you. But I can. For reasons which both you and I understand you are going to clear out of this part of the country."

"Am I?" asked Trevors. The look of his eyes did not alter, the poise of his big body did not shift, his hands, both at his sides again, might have been carved in bronze.

Then suddenly he laughed and threw out his arms in a wide gesture and again dropped them, saying shortly:

"You're playing the game the way I thought you would. You've got a gun. I am unarmed—begin your shooting and be d—d to you!"

He even stepped forward, his eyes fearfully upon Lee's, and settled his big frame comfortably in a chair by the table.

"Go ahead," he concluded. "I'm ready."

"That's as it should be!" Lee's voice was vibrant. His hard eyes brightened. With a quick jerk he drew the revolver from his belt and dropped it to the floor at Carson's feet.

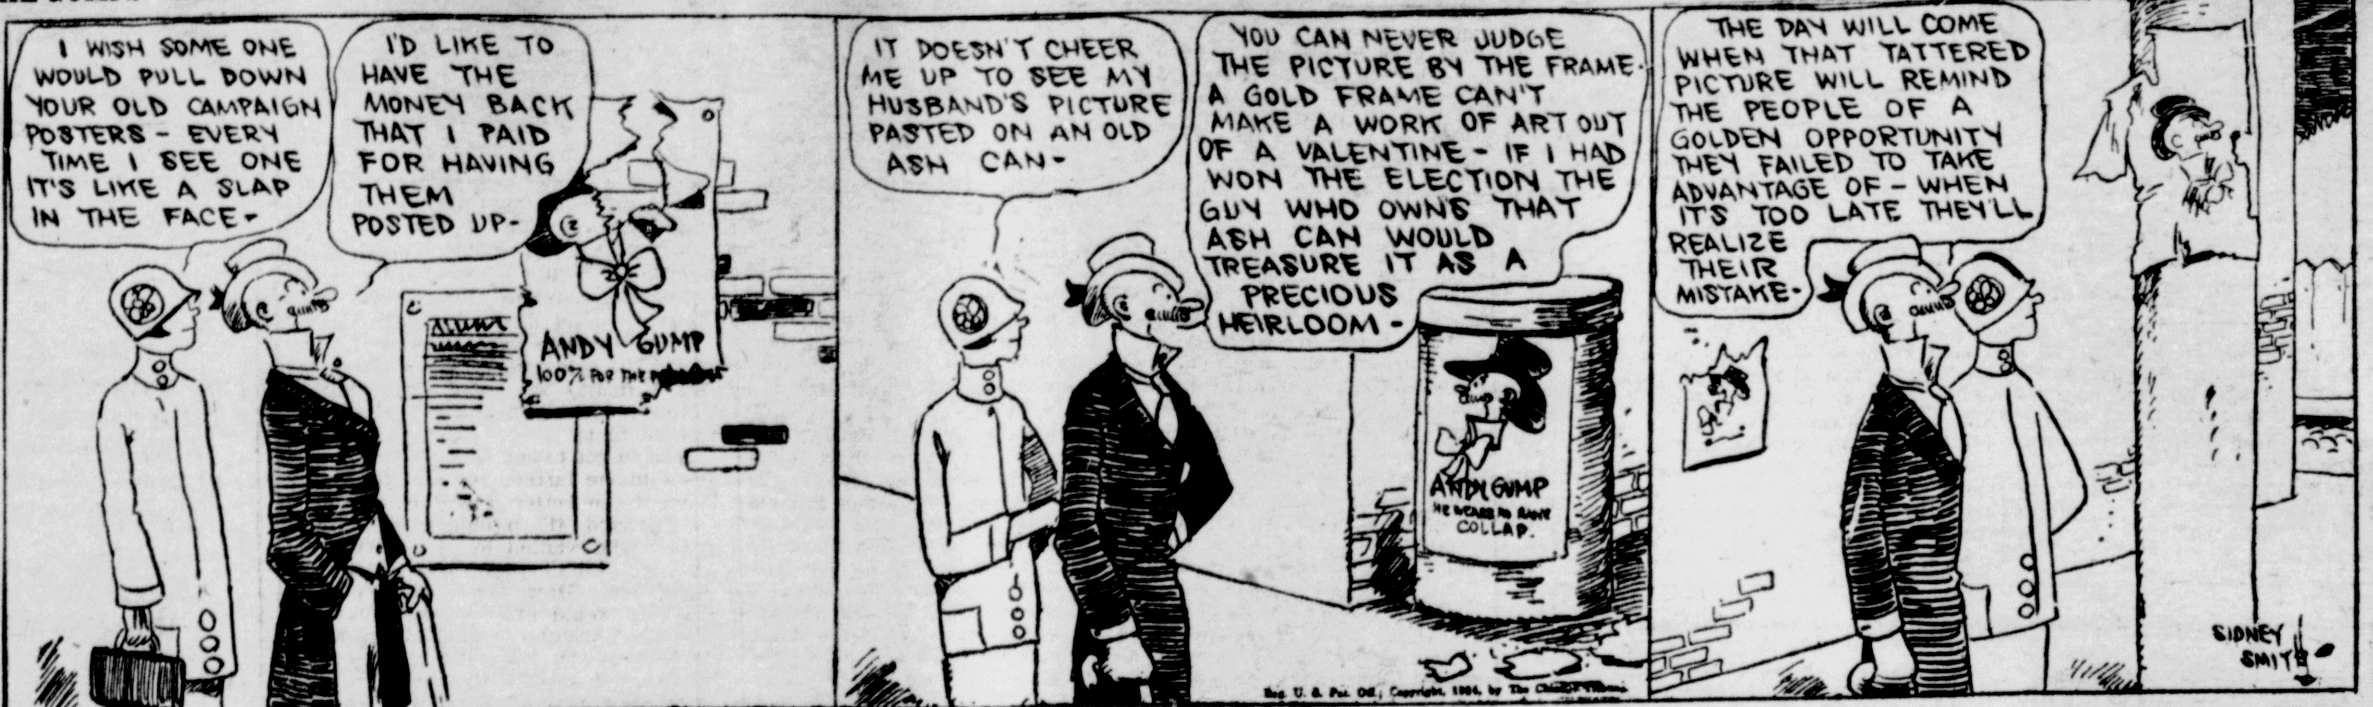

Carson, though he stooped for it quickly, did not shift his watchful eyes from Trevors. For Carson had known more fights in his life than he had years; he knew men, and looked to Trevors for just the sort of thing Trevors did.

As Lee stepped forward, Trevors snatched open the drawer of the table at his side, quick as lightning, and whipped out the weapon which lay there.

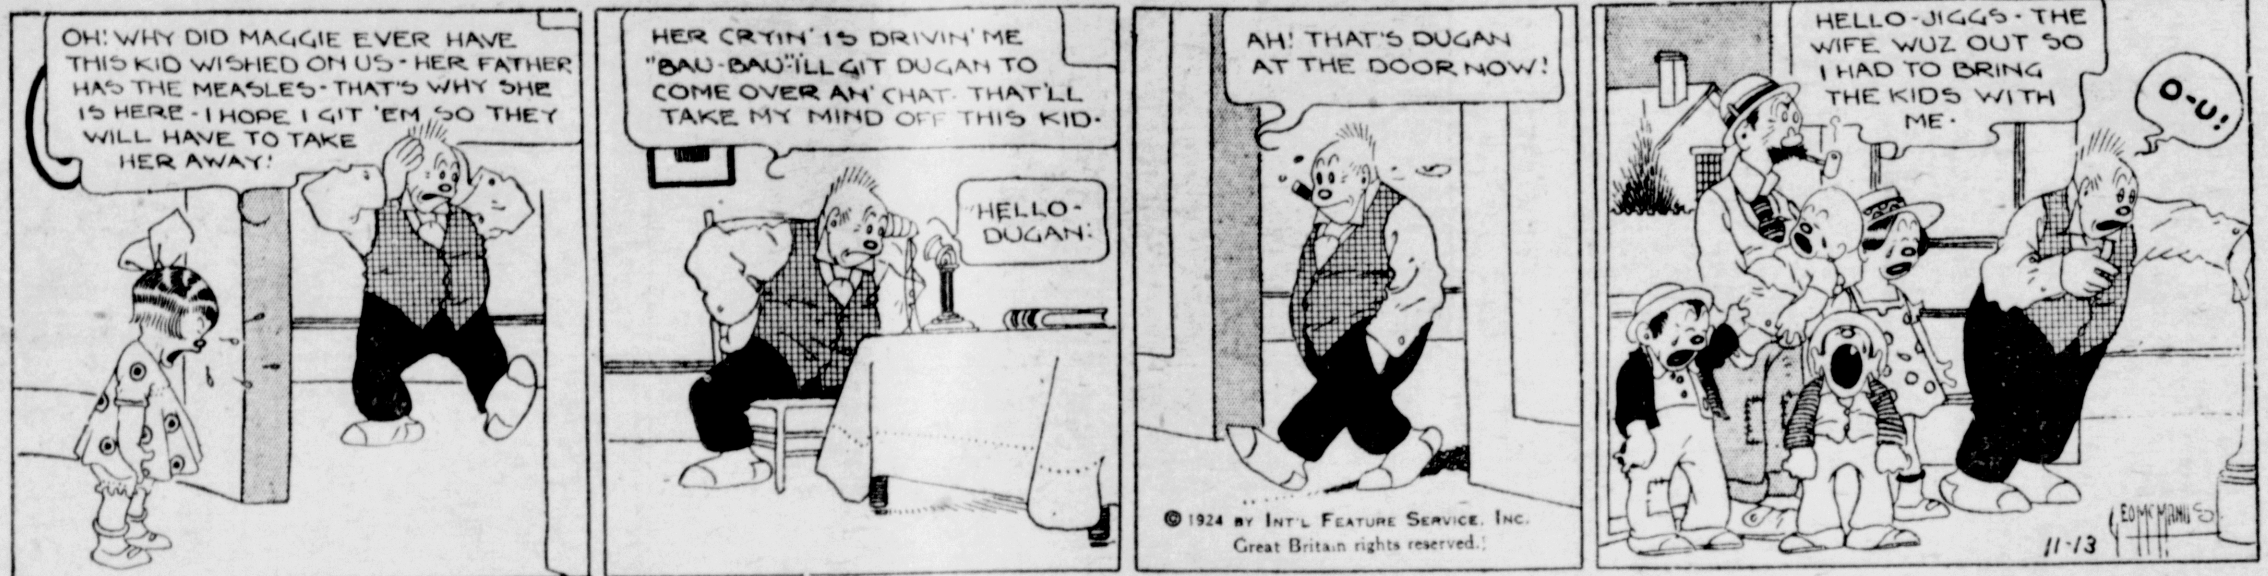

"Go slow, Trevors," came old Carson's dry voice. "I've got you covered already, two-gun style."

Now and then Carson sent a quick questioning glance toward Lee's inscrutable face; now and then he sighed, his thoughts his own. Bud Lee, knowing his companion as he did, shrewdly guessed that Carson was hoping that events might so befall that there would be an open, free-for-all fight and that he might not be forced to play the restless part of a mere onlooker. Bud Lee hoped otherwise.

"There's two ways to get a man," said Carson meditatively, out of a long silence. "An' both is good ways; with a gun or with your hands."

"Yes," agreed Bud quietly.

"If it works out gun way," continued Carson, still with that thoughtful, half-abstracted look in his eyes, "it don't hurt to remember, Bud, that he shoots left-handed an' from the hip."

Lee merely nodded. Carson did not look up from the hobbling ears of his horse as he continued: "If it works out the other way an' it's just fists, it don't hurt to remember how Trevors put out Scotty Webb last year in Rocky Bend. Four-footed style, striking with his boot square in Scotty's belly."

Trevors' name was not again referred to even in the vaguest terms. The road in front of them, at last dropping down into the valley in which the lumber camp was, straightened out into a lane that ran between stumps to the clutter of frame buildings.

"Something doing at the office," offered Carson, as they drew near. "Directors' meeting, likely."

Two automobiles stood in the road ten steps from the closed door of the unpretentious shack which bore the printed legend, "Office, Western Lumber Company." The big red touring car certainly belonged to Melvin, the company's president, Carson looked curiously at Lee.

Bud dismounted, dropped his horse's reins, shifted the revolver from his shirt to his belt where it was at once unhidden and loosely held, ready for a quick draw. Then he went up the three steps, Carson at his heels, his gun also unhidden and ready. From within came voices, one in protest, Bayne Trevors ringing out, filled with mastery followed by a laugh. Lee set his hand to the door. Then, only because it was locked from within, did he knock sharply.

"Who is it?" came the sharp inquiry. But the man who made it and who was standing by the door, threw it open.

"What do you want?" he demanded again. "We're busy."

"I want to see Trevors," said Lee coolly.

"You can't. He—"

Lee shoved the man aside and strode on. Carson, closely at Lee's heels, his eyes glittering, stepped a little aside when once he was within the room and took his place with his back against the wall close to the door.

It was a big, bare, barn-like room, furnished simply with one long table and half a dozen chairs. Here were five men besides Bayne Trevors. All except Trevors and the man who had opened the door were seated; Trevors, at the far end of the room, was standing, an oratorical arm slowly dropping to his side.

His eyes met Lee's, ran quickly to Carson's, came back to Lee's and rested there steadily. Beyond the slow falling of his extended arm, he did not move. The muscles of his face hardened, the look of triumph which just now had stood in his eyes changed slowly and in its place came an expression that was twin to that in Bud Lee's eyes, just a look of inscrutability with a hint of watchfulness under it, and the hardness of agate. While a man might have drawn a deep breath into his lungs and expelled it, neither Lee nor Trevors stirred.

"What the devil is this?" demanded Melvin from across the table. "Hold up or what?" He rapped the table resoundingly.

"Shut up!" snapped Carson. "It's just a two-man play, Melvin; Lee an' Trevors."

"Oh," said Melvin, and sank back, making no further protest. He was no stranger to Carson or to Bud Lee, and he sensed what might lie between Lee and a man like Trevors. Then, shrugging his shoulders, he said carelessly: "I'm not the man to get in other men's way, and you know it, Carson. But you might tell your friend, Bud Lee, that Bayne Trevors is rather a big man influentially to mix things with. I've just resigned this morning and Trevors is our new president."

"Thanks," returned Carson dryly. "I don't think that'll make much difference though, Melvin. Most likely you'll have two presidents resigning the same day."

At last Lee spoke. "Trevors," he said quietly, "maybe the law can't get you. But I can. For reasons which both you and I understand you are going to clear out of this part of the country."

"Am I?" asked Trevors. The look of his eyes did not alter, the poise of his big body did not shift, his hands, both at his sides again, might have been carved in bronze.

Then suddenly he laughed and threw out his arms in a wide gesture and again dropped them, saying shortly:

"You're playing the game the way I thought you would. You've got a gun. I am unarmed—begin your shooting and be d—d to you!"

He even stepped forward, his eyes fearlessly upon Lee's, and settled his big frame comfortably in a chair by the table.

"Go ahead," he concluded. "I'm ready."

"That's as it should be!" Lee's voice was vibrant. His hard eyes brightened. With a quick jerk he drew the revolver from his belt and dropped it to the floor at Carson's feet.

Carson, though he stooped for it quickly, did not shift his watchful eyes from Trevors. For Carson had known more fights in his life than he had years; he knew men, and looked to Trevors for just the sort of thing Trevors did.

Jesus wanted this poor fellow to realize that he was fixed up for keeps and that he didn't expect him to take a few feeble steps and then lie down again.

It was sad enough, God knows, to see that poor paralytic lying there on his dirty bed but it would have been a good deal sadder to have found him there the next day after Jesus had met him and found his poor, palsied body full of palpitating, pulsing, red-corpuscles health. And the saddest thing in the universe is to see a soul once touched with the glorious health of Jesus go hobbling back to Bethesda and lie down on a bed of paralysis.

One day last July I saw a large vessel launched from the Cramp shipyards in Philadelphia—one of the largest they ever put out. As she shot down the greased runners she seemed to be a living, breathing thing, throbbing with a mighty ambition for the sea.

Launching Ships.

It's great to see the way they do it. They take two long runners at an angle of twenty-three degrees and on top of them place two others with grease enough between them to start a soap factory. They bolt them at the upper end and then on the top of the runners the ship is built, first the keel and then the ribs of steel and then a million bolts grip fast the mighty sheets of iron that make her sides. And as they rise from keel to deck everywhere the Titanic thing is stayed by timber props until as you walk beneath it you seem to be wading among a forest of branches of trees. Next goes in the heart—deep down in its breast—great engines of 10,000 horse power whose mighty throbbings are to laugh the fury of the sea to scorn. And when the stacks are raised and the decks are laid, promenade an main and all the rest, the hour has come for launching. The flags of every nation, Old Glory above them all, stream from stem to stern. At the stem of the vessel rises a stand where distinguished guests assemble. Some favored girl is there to break a bottle of wine over its nose—she's going to christen it. Where the fool custom of using wine came from I don't know. You might as well bust a bottle of booze over your baby's head at the baptismal font. When the Tennessee was launched Miss Warfield christened her with a bottle of water—me for Miss Warfield!

"All ready now boys, we'll let her go."

What are those thundering, thumping sounds? It's the music of battering rams swung by a jolly host of brawny-built tollers bumping down the props. Everybody is on the "qui vive." Every window is crammed; every roof is crowded and every pier is packed.

And now listen, some one is sawing timber. Those top runners on which the great ship is resting and which are bolted down only at the top are being sawn in two. The band begins to play. The crowd holds its breath and the mighty monster of the deep, as if anxious to get away, as the saw has nearly done its work, tears the fibers from the bolted end that holds it back. The bottle smashes! A voice says, "I christen thee Great Northern" and the old greyhound of the ocean shoots down the greased plank to the music of the band and thousands of shouting throats, out into the water as gracefully as a sea gull dips down from the skies.

And now in fancy I see that boat putting out from the wharf for the sunny climes of other lands. The flags are flying; the bands are playing; loved ones on the dock are shouting, "Good bye; God bless you!" and the journey is begun. All nature seems interested in the trip; the skies smile and the shining sun kisses the ocean's face and turns its ripples into silver and its feathery foam into gold.

But just outside the bar the winds rise, the air grows dark and the hurricane comes. The ocean is lashed into a fury and the proud strong ship begins to show its metal. She rolls and tosses and rides waves until her twin screws buzz in midair, but she sticks her steel nose into the black banks of the scowling waves and plows on.

Sin's Breakers.

But a cry is heard, "Breakers dead ahead!" shouts the captain, but it's too late. They said she couldn't sink, but when she ran her proud steel head into that mountain of rock just bulging up through the surface of the sea, she gave one deep-seated groan and trembling like a thing of life, she settled over on her side and went down to a watery grave.

And how sad it is! And how it makes your heart ache! And how you sympathize with those whose loved ones went down! Maybe some one you loved was on board, and how sad it is! But, oh, its sadder than that when its the shipwreck of a soul. You started out full of joy; you came down in a meeting like this may be and gave your heart to Christ, and you thought and everybody else did, you were going to sail well across the sea of life. But just a little beyond the bar and things became unsettled—temptations came—old companions got about you; your old lust stood up before you again and it was too much for you and you went down and today you're away from God and back again in the old life of sin where you used to be.

There's a picture in one of our galleries of an old derelict of a vessel, an old battered hulk of a rough sea with threatening clouds. No canvas ever spoke with plainer voice its message. I might describe it; I might comment on it, but down underneath the painting is a verse that tells the whole wretched, pathetic story. Listen to the words:

"Storm-beaten, torn and tossed
By night and day,
Lone, Lorn, Lamented, Lost;
Drifting away."

What a picture of many a soul I know and you know. And I didn't make any mistake when I said that such a wreck is sadder than that of any Titanic or any ship that ever sailed the seas.

Now why is it? It's because you don't take up your bed. You leave the thing in a way that makes it easy to go back.

The Drunken Churchman.

John Culpepper tells us that one time the church officers had one of his members up for drunkenness. The fellow's name was Johnson and he was very penitent and said he was ashamed of his own weakness, and Mr. Culpepper told him he was not surprised at all and that seemed to hurt the fellow's feelings and he said, "Brother Culpepper I thought you believed in me and was expecting me to hold out," and Mr. Culpepper said, "Johnson I did believe in you and was expecting you to hold out but the first time I saw you in town after you had joined the church, you hitched your horse to the same old hitching post that you had tied to for years, just fifteen feet from the bar room where you've spent thousands of dollars and gotten drunk hundreds of times, and I said to myself then, 'If old Johnson don't change his hitching post he'll be drunk again in six months!' If you had been afraid of yourself and afraid of your old associates and afraid of the devil and tied your horse way around yonder to the Methodist church horse rack and asked me or Bill Hayes to go down town with you for the first few times I would have expected you to make the steep grade." And I tell you that old hitching post explains the difficulty with about nine-tenths of the old backsliders you find in the church today.

You've got to cut loose from the old life and the farther you can get away from it the better it will be for you. We prayed till midnight with one fellow who wanted to be a Christian, but he didn't want to give up his cigarettes. How much do you suppose he would ever have amounted to as a Christian if he had stuck to that senseless, fool habit. Some one asked the question, "What effect does cigarettes have on the brain?" It's a question that can't be answered because nobody with any brains ever smoked.

What Keeps You Back?

Now what is the thing in your life more than anything else that's been keeping you away from God? Is it the booze on your sideboard, the card-table in your home, the Christ-dishonoring crowd you've been training with? Well, do you think for one minute you can become a Christian and stay one and not say "Good bye" absolutely to that thing? There's no power in the universe can save some people unless they make a clean cut with the world. Get a new hitching post; get rid of the trifling, godless crowd you've been training with; change your track and your drive; say "good bye" to the old life and the dirty deeds of the flesh. Be a man and be true like you know you ought to be. Don't be a mollycoddle.

Every lady attending the matinee at the American Theatre Wed., Thurs. and Fri., Nov. 12, 13 and 14, will receive a loaf of Betsy Ross Bread free.

High Eleven Faces Crucial Test of Season Here Saturday

Michigan Favored In 21st Game With Buckeyes Saturday

Crowd of 73,000 or More Will Jam Stadium for State Home-coming Event; Teams to Hold Final Practices Friday.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 13.—Lacking only the championship element to make the picture complete, Ohio State and Michigan meet here Saturday in the Ohio Stadium in what promises to be one of the great spectacles of the 1924 season. While both teams have been defeated once this fall and are therefore apparently out of the running for the Big Ten title, the signs point to Michigan as the stronger of the two.

Saturday's game will be the twenty-first between the two eleven whose football rivalry extends back to 1897. It will be the seventh contest between teams coached by Dr. J. W. Wiley and Fielding H. Yost, the veteran mentors of the two camps. Not counting the "informal" game of 1918, the two schools stand three to two in favor of the Buckeyes in spite of their defeat in 1922 and 1923.

Indications point to an attendance that will set a record in the Western Conference for the current season and there is even a possibility that the crowd may be larger than that of 1922 when the same teams drew a throng of 73,000 upon the occasion of the dedication of the Ohio Stadium. With all of the permanent seats numbering 63,000 sold, arrangements were being completed today to provide temporary room for another 10,000.

Thousands of Ohio State alumni and the vanguard of the invading Michigan delegation will be pouring into the city Friday for the game, which is also the annual Home-Coming contest. The Home-Coming celebration will begin Friday night with the annual student circus.

Because of the number of cripples on his squad, Dr. Wiley was still in doubt as to the exact nature of his starting lineup. John Nichols, regular left tackle, who was injured in the Wooster game was still on crutches up to the middle of the week and seems to be definitely out of the Michigan if not the Illinois game next week also. It is uncertain whether Mackey or Harrison or some other reserve lineman will start in Nichols' place.

The rest of the line probably will be much the same as that which started against Indiana with a possibility that Gorrill may replace Wilson because of an injury to the latter's hand, sustained in the Indiana game. The backfield is much more in doubt. "Jake" Carmon, quarterback, and "Wendy" Wendler, halfback, being the only two who are pretty sure to start.

Both teams were scheduled for final workouts in the Stadium Friday afternoon with the Wolverines being given the use of the gridiron first and the Wilcemen afterward.

An elaborate program of ceremonies has been arranged for the game. In addition to the usual features, a ceremony honoring the first varsity football team in Ohio State history will take place between halves. All of the seven living members of the first team of 11 men to compete in an intercollegiate game here in 1890 have promised to attend. They are: C. W. Foultz and Dr. C. B. Morrey, Columbus; D. S. Gogler, Austin, O.; H. T. Johnston, Troy, O.; Jesse H. Jones, Pittsburgh, Pa.; P. M. Lincoln, Ithaca, N. Y., and H. H. Richardson, Brooklyn Heights, O.

LAUNCH POCKET BILLIARD GAMES

A pocket billiards tournament to decide city supremacy, has gotten under way at the American billiard parlor. The first game was staged on Wednesday night with the following results:

Sharks—Gatrell 15, Christy 17, Brown 19, total 51; Whales—Lansing 17, L. Herbert 8, S. Schaffer 9, total 34. Brown scored 12 for high run.

Firpo, Beaten By Weinert, Faces Finish

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—"What Firpo needs," quoth a critic this morning, "is plenty of road work—miles and miles of it."

After watching the gentleman in question flounder through 12 rounds with Charlie Weinert in Newark last night, the writer lends his hearty commendation to this suggestion, provided the following condition is accepted:

Firpo must do all his roadwork in one direction, to wit: Due south, with Buenos Ayres as his immediate objective.

He is all over and done in these parts, through as a showman, through as a drawing card, through as a fighter. His speed is gone, so is his punch. There isn't the slightest reason for him to dally longer here. He drew only $12,000 at the box office and a beating in almost every round for his efforts last night.

Weinert, trained for once in his life, simply stabbed the senior's face into human hamburger. Luis, meantime, essayed ludicrous attempts at boxing and footwork while the fat about his abdomen jellied and shook and shivered. Those rolls are a permanent institution.

Firpo weighed 220 pounds, nearly his normal ringside poundage. He had taken off everything that was due to come.

Ringside critics varied in awarding Weinert from nine rounds to the entire 12, but this seemed to the writer to be dabbling in morbid details. The exhibition itself was bad enough without parading its post mortem.

Suffice it to say that if Firpo won any one of the 12 rounds, he skillfully concealed the fact from the general public.

This is the same man who ventured within a punch of winning the heavyweight championship from Jack Dempsey hardly more than a year ago. He, perforce, is not the same fighter. He merely has the same name and general position of the eyebrows. His successive exhibitions against Willis and Weinert have led to the supposition that Dempsey was either a very charitable or a very stupid young man on the memorable night of September 14, 1923.

Dempsey slugged with the Senior. No one does that nowadays. They simply step around his anchored hulk and slap him silly. They might even go so far as to slug with him, if they cared to do so. Seemingly, that famed right hand of his is no more.

That might be taken as accounting for the fact that Firpo loses now where once he knocked them over, and in one sense, it does. In another, it does nothing of the kind. When Firpo was beating Brenna, Willard

STATE ELEVEN EASY FOR W.-L.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 12.—Three state university eleven have been downed this year by the fine Washington & Lee eleven which meets West Virginia at Laidley stadium, Charleston, this Saturday afternoon. Doubtful ones are wondering what will happen to the Mountaineer eleven—the fourth state team to oppose the Generals—and regard the fate of the others as an ill omen.

Maryland, which last year defeated Penn and made such a creditable showing against Yale, was defeated rather decisively early in October. Shortly after the Generals scored an impressive victory over Kentucky and about ten days ago gave Virginia a sound drubbing. The three eleven are among the best in their respective sections and "Greasy" Neale's team made a very creditable showing against Harvard.

The Mountaineers, however, are not giving Washington & Lee's impressive record much thought. They are chiefly concerned with the Generals themselves and having learned from experience that past performances count for little are preparing for Saturday's battle with all the earnestness shown before last year's conflict.

Paddock on Tour.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—After a flying visit to this city, Charlie Paddock still recognized as the world's champion sprinter in spite of his defeats at the Olympic games, departed in a late train last night for Pittsburgh, where he will begin a lecture tour to day. Paddock was elected a delegate to the national convention of the A. A. U. at Atlantic City, next week, representing the Southern Pacific association. He will endeavor to persuade the convention to award its annual outdoor champions to Pasadena.

Paddock visited the local A. A. U. headquarters in company with Loren Murchison, his most dangerous rival in the sprints.

and others, he had the winning complex. He was a tough citizen with a heavy punch and he thought he was invincible. He knows now that he isn't and with that knowledge, fifty per cent of his morale, his will to win, has gone out of him.

SPORT SPARKS

Tom Gibbons, who strikingly differs from his contemporaries in the squared circle in that he will fight anybody, has accounted for the only bout of importance in the coming months by agreeing to swap punches with Kid Norfolk, Negro light heavyweight, on Dec. 8. Thomas deserves infinite credit for rising his prestige with Norfolk, greatly feared by other white fighters.

The bout will be for the Xmas fund, and Tom will try to hang his famous sock on Norfolk's jaw. Gibbons hasn't been in on a big purse for so long that said stocking is getting rather empty.

Fighting for charity will be nothing new for the St. Paul flash. For taking on Dempsey he got nothing, minus his training expenses. For polishing off Bloomfield, the English bloomer, he got several dozen shillings and a sea voyage.

Heavyweight division is now dead-end than the cushions on a lodge pool table. Dempsey appears to be surer of his crown than King George himself.

Eastern promoters are facing bankruptcy. Only way you can get a heavyweight to fight in New York at present is to tell the cook she is fired.

Promoters thought they had solved the problem by deciding to import new blood from California, but voters of that state nipped up the program by legalizing 12-round bouts. And with coal worth its weight in liquor, it looks as if the home talent would remain in balmy California, where they are well off.

FLATTERY GIVEN BACKFIELD JOB

WOOSTER, Nov. 12.—Flattery, giant tackle, has been shifted to the backfield on offense by Coach Boles this week, in an effort to develop a greater drive in the team's attack. He may be used in this position against Cincinnati Saturday, but will play tackle on defense. Other shake-ups are likely before Saturday, because Wooster has not shown the form expected.

WILL TORONTO PULL SURPRISE?

Steubenville Fans Expect Anything in Coming Series.

STEUBENVILLE, Nov. 13.—After the stunt they pulled last year in shoving the Akron Professional team intact into the game to represent their city, local fans are just a little dubious as to what Toronto may do this year in their anxiety to beat the Ex-Collegians and take the Ohio Valley championship crown back up the river.

The Toronto management and their fans who claim to know what's going on openly state that their regular team with possibly four additions is capable of turning the trick and that no such move as last year is contemplated, yet the step taken last year is an indication as to how the Gem City will go and most anything can be expected when the two teams line up for battle next Sunday.

Unlike last year neither club boasts of an unbeaten record. Akron trimmed Toronto and the McKeesport Olympics held one victory over the Ex-Collegians, though the latter team more than evened up matters Sunday by trouncing the Olympics.

Since the Toronto-Akron game the middle of the season the Tigers have bolstered their lineup greatly and they are coming down Sunday with blood in their eye to avenge the defeat handed them by the Stubbers in 1923. Open play of the kind that has not been seen here all year is on tap according to the Toronto fans.

Reports are that Coaches Kidder and Easterday have arranged to have every Tiger player practice Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons to perfect a passing game to use in the opening game of the series. The Ex-Collegians have all been ordered to report here Saturday morning and two workouts will be held by them prior to the clash.

Plenty of surprises will be forthcoming. The managers of both clubs appear to be holding something back in their eagerness to annex the 1924 title. More college luminaries and All-Americans will be seen in this game

Boone's Squad Will Try to Blast Title Hopes of Leetonia

Rising to a place of hitherto undreamed of prominence in county football circles as a result of their striking series of gridiron conquests since the opening of the 1924 campaign, Leetonia scholastic warriors today are facing the most critical battle of the entire season. They will turn their guns on Coach O. V. Boone's contingent Saturday afternoon at Patterson Field, and the contest, regarded prior to opening of the football year as not at all important, has become, in the eyes of Blue and White players, officials and fans, the big game of the year, almost over night. And in view of the fact, the local grid mentor is preparing his plans accordingly.

A county championship hangs upon the outcome of the plot—a championship that will go unquestionably and without doubt to Leetonia if the north countians defeat the Blue and White. But the "if" is a big one and in the minds of local adherents, will develop than in any clash ever before held in the Ohio Valley.

The opening game of the series last year is said to have drawn 6,000 fans to Kilgus field. The local playlot will not hold that many people but extra seats are to be put up to accommodate as many folks as possible. The game annually draws fans from the river front as far north as Midland and East Liverpool and south to the Wheeling-Bellaire district. Manager Tarr of the Tigers has asked the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley traction company to have no less than twelve special cars ready to transport his fans to and from the game.

into an insurmountable obstacle for the invaders. For high school grid-ders, realizing the importance of the clash, are outdoing the proverbial Trojans at Patterson Field these days. The tackling dummy is groaning and creaking miserably as Boone's lads tear into its inanimate form. Practice hours are long and arduous. There is no letup. No Napoleonic army followed more zealously the orders of its leader than the local youngsters those, of Boone.

No fear permeates the Blue and White camp, incidentally, as a result of the Leetonia team's brilliant record of the season. There is a substantial spirit of confidence that the north countians are to meet their Waterloo and that their championship aspirations, which lack but a game to be fulfilled, will be dispelled as dreams before the awakening.

A victory will place a feather of no mean size in the collective headgear of the East Liverpool eleven and will in a large measure indicate atonement for the defeat at Salem.

Salem decisively defeated East Liverpool. Leetonia nosed out a 7 to 6 win over Salem and has won from Lisbon and Wellsville. In consequence of these facts, that quality of reckoning known as the dope would have Leetonia a better team than the Ceramic City outfit, on paper.

But the cautioning of those who seem to know is—forget the dope and figure only on a game between a county championship-mad Leetonia team and a strengthened, determined East Liverpool squad which will be pointed especially for this game as it has been for no other.

Steubenville Fans Expect Anything in Coming Series.

STEUBENVILLE, Nov. 13.—After the stunt they pulled last year in showing the Akron Professional team intact into the game to represent their city, local fans are just a little dubious as to what Toronto may do this year in their anxiety to beat the Ex-Collegians and take the Ohio Valley championship crown back up the river.

The Toronto management and their fans who claim to know what's going on openly state that their regular team with possibly four additions is capable of turning the trick and that no such move as last year is contemplated, yet the step taken last year is an indication as to how the Gem City will go and most anything can be expected when the two teams line up for battle next Sunday.

Unlike last year neither club boasts of an unbeaten record. Akron trimmed Toronto and the McKeesport Olympics held one victory over the Ex-Collegians, though the latter team more than evened up matters Sunday by trouncing the Olympics.

Since the Toronto-Akron game the middle of the season the Tigers have bolstered their lineup greatly and they are coming down Sunday with blood in their eyes to avenge the defeat handed them by the Stubbers in 1923. Open play of the kind that has not been seen here all year is on tap according to the Toronto fans.

Reports are that Coaches Kidder and Easterday have arranged to have every Tiger player practice Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons to perfect a passing game to use in the opening game of the series. The Ex-Collegians have all been ordered to report here Saturday morning and two workouts will be held by them prior to the clash.

Plenty of surprises will be forthcoming. The managers of both clubs appear to be holding something back in their eagerness to annex the 1924 title. More college luminaries and All-Americans will be seen in this game

Boone's Squad Will Try to Blast Title Hopes of Leetonia

Rising to a place of hitherto undreamed of prominence in county football circles as a result of their striking series of gridiron conquests since the opening of the 1924 campaign, Leetonia scholastic warriors today are facing the most critical battle of their entire season. They will turn their guns on Coach O. V. Boone's contingent Saturday afternoon at Patterson Field, and the contest, regarded prior to opening of the football year as not at all important, has become, in the eyes of Blue and White players, officials and fans, the big game of the year, almost over night. And in view of the fact, the local grid mentor is preparing his plans accordingly.

A county championship hangs upon the outcome of the plot—a championship that will go unquestionably and without doubt to Leetonia if the north countians defeat the Blue and White. But the "if" is a big one and in the minds of local adherents, will develop than in any clash ever before held in the Ohio Valley.

The opening game of the series last year is said to have drawn 6,000 fans to Kilgus field. The local playlot will not hold that many people but extra seats are to be put up to accommodate as many folks as possible. The game annually draws fans from the river front as far north as Midland and East Liverpool and south to the Wheeling-Bellaire district. Manager Tarr of the Tigers has asked the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley traction company to have no less than twelve special cars ready to transport his fans to and from the game.

into an insurmountable obstacle for the invaders. For high school grid-ders, realizing the importance of the clash, are outdoing the proverbial Trojans at Patterson Field these days. The tackling dummy is groaning and creaking miserably as Boone's lads tear into its inanimate form. Practice hours are long and arduous. There is no letup. No Napoleonic army followed more zealously the orders of its leader than the local youngsters those, of Boone.

No fear permeates the Blue and White camp, incidentally, as a result of the Leetonia team's brilliant record of the season. There is a substantial spirit of confidence that the north countians are to meet their Waterloo and that their championship aspirations, which lack but a game to be fulfilled, will be dispelled as dreams before the awakening.

A victory will place a feather of no mean size in the collective headgear of the East Liverpool eleven and will in a large measure indicate atonement for the defeat at Salem.

Salem decisively defeated East Liverpool. Leetonia nosed out a 7 to 6 win over Salem and has won from Lisbon and Wellsville. In consequence of these facts, that quality of reckoning known as the dope would have Leetonia a better team than the Ceramic City outfit, on paper.

But the cautioning of those who seem to know is—forget the dope and figure only on a game between a county championship-mad Leetonia team and a strengthened, determined East Liverpool squad which will be pointed especially for this game as it has been for no other.

Grid Fans Gather for State-Michigan Scrap.

By STANLEY D. KOCH.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 13.—In a Hegira to Columbia, that will probably compare well with Coxe's march to Washington, Shermans march to the sea, Napoleon's retreat from Moscow and the passage of the Israelites through the Red sea, all the roads that lead to the Ohio Capitol will soon be teeming with autos, busses and hikers bound for the Ohio State-Michigan football game, Saturday.

There is only the slightest possibility that this contest will actually affect the Big Ten race, for both elevens have suffered defeat, while Illinois and Chicago have only the games to stain their records. But the annual Michigan-Ohio clash is a classic. It represents the State triumph in which neighboring sections so delight. It means a re-dedication of the Ohio stadium by a real conquest, if the Buckeyes win and it means another glorious year, regardless of all else, should the Wolverines triumph. In consequence of last week's catastrophe State suffered at the hands of Indiana, Michigan enters the game as favorite. Then, too, among the 70,000 expected, there will be some 20,000 Maize and Blue supporters who believe that the Illinois defeat only served to spur the Wolverines on to a real conquest.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO COLUMBUS

By STANLEY D. KOCH.
CLEVELAND, Nov. 13.—In a Hegira to Columbia, that will probably compare well with Coxe's march to Washington, the Michigan football team, the "Reds," are marching to the sea. The team, which has been through the Red Sea, all the roads that lead to the Ohio Capitol will soon be teeming with autos, busses and hikers bound for the Ohio State-Michigan football game, Saturday.

There is only the slightest possibility that this contest will actually affect the Big Ten race, for both teams have suffered defeat, while Illinois and Chicago have only the games to stain their records. But the annual Michigan-Ohio clash is a classic. It represents the State triumph in which neighboring sections so delight. It means a re-dedication of the Ohio stadium by a real conquest, if the Buckeyes win and it means another glorious year, regardless of all else, should the Wolverines triumph.

In consequence of last week's catastrophe State suffered at the hands of Indiana, Michigan enters the game as favorite. Then, too, among the 70,000 expected, there will be some 20,000 Maize and Blue supporters who believe that the Illinois defeat only served to spur the Wolverines on to a real conquest.

Undoubtedly, Michigan has "come back" in the vernacular interpretation of the phrase. Disrupted and torn after the Illinois struggle, the Michigan eleven re-aligned its shattered forces and smashed all further opposition to the four winds, and probably several of the dragons.

State's Important Game.
Ohio State, on the other hand, after creating a defense that held Iowa scoreless and kept the now famous Chicago Maroons from tallying a touchdown and emerged from that game with a 3-3 tie, has somehow, somehow, fazed injuries have been exceedingly great, but all this is now past.

For three years, the annual aim was to beat Michigan. After the Wolverines returned to the Big Ten fold some seven years ago, the Buckeyes put across wins over the Northerners four straight times. Then came the stadium dedication and the Michigan exultation. Last year's hopes of revenge were smothered under another Michigan triumph. This year, all odds point to a third Buckeye loss. That is, all odds, except the constantly drilled aim of the Scarlet and Grey that if nothing else happens, if no other game is won—"Michigan must be beaten."

In all chances, there will be no passes used by Ohio in this contest than all the rest of the year. With a weak line and a questionable backfield, while must resort to the aerial game, which first brought him his successes. From the Maize and Blue standpoint, the chief Michigan ground gaining plays have been tosses by Friedman to Rockwell, Flora or Marion. As said before, all signs point toward a Wolverine win, but no signs are truly effective in a game, so characterized by State Rally.

Grange to Run Again.
Illinois, whose tie with Chicago raised Harold Grange to a pedestal almost reached by individual players, meets the off-defeated Minnesota eleven at Minneapolis. Of course, Grange should again run wild and probably will, for Spaulding, the football form and the 7-7 tie with Iowa State at Ames, last week, doesn't make the Gophers appear very strong.

More important, however, is the Iowa-Wisconsin battle at Madison. The Hawkeys, pre-season contenders, fell before a merciless Illinois attack. Last week, they barely defeated Butler at Iowa City. But, Wisconsin has shown nothing as yet this season and unless it profited by the overwhelming defeat suffered at the hands of Notre Dame, last week, appears to be in for another trimming.

Chicago, attaining national fame by its sparkling tie with Illinois, takes on the battered Northwestern eleven at Chicago. The purple, despite Baker and Welicks, proved easy for Michigan, not only being unable to do anything with the Wolverine line, but also unable to stop the Michigan passing and end runs. The Maroons should have a pleasant practice, characterized by some more remarkable line bucking by McCarty, Thomas, Caruso and others.

Indiana, victorious over Ohio State through the sparkling running of half-back Marks and the remarkable line bucking ability of Captain Sloate, encounters Wabash at Bloomington, while Purdue, the other Western Conference team, remains idle this week.

PLANT WORKERS TO ATTEND MEETS

Plans have been arranged for employees of various industrial plants in this section of the city to attend evangelistic services at the tabernacle during the next few weeks of the campaign.

Number of plant employees have already attended services in a body, but several other large delegations are scheduled to visit the big shed before the meetings come to a close.

PINCHOT REMOVES BAN ON HUNTING

Hunters across the state line in Pennsylvania are now at liberty to visit all parts of the state as a result of a proclamation issued Wednesday by Governor Pinchot removing the ban which has existed since November 1, when opening of the season was halted by the governor because of the danger of forest fires.

The proclamation pointed out that rain had fallen in some sections and heavy mists and dew in others so that the situation in those sections now closed is no worse than in those open to hunting.

New Plant Manager.

C. W. Bowman, who has been employed as superintendent of the Carrollton Pottery company, has accepted a position as general manager of the Smith, Phillips plant in East End. He will take up his duties here next week. He has been connected with the Carrollton plant for the past eight years.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No gripping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a dark brown mouth—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, at bed time.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.
